A debenture trust deed created a general floating charge over all its undertaking & assets both present & future, but reserved to the co. power to create in priority to that charge such mtges. or charges as the co. should think proper "by the deposit of any dock warrants, bills of lading, or other similar commercial documents, or upon any raw materials, or finished or partly finished products & stock for the purpose of raising money in the ordinary course of the business of the co." In pursuance of the power & in the course & for the purposes of its business, the co. raised £12,000 & secured payment thereof by charging all the before-mentioned documents, materials & stock, both present & future, by way of a floating security to rank in priority to the floating charge created by the trust deed:—Held: the power reserved to the co., except as to subject-matter & purpose, was unlimited; it enabled the co. to choose the form of a floating charge, if required, & the second charge was valid & entitled to priority over the first charge.—Re AUTOMATIC BOTTLE MAKERS, OSBORNE v. AUTOMATIC BOTTLE MAKERS, [1926] Ch. 412; 95 L. A scheme for reconstruction of the co. provided for the mtge. bonds being exchanged for income bonds subject to an issue of first income bonds; also that a committee, one only of whom was to be appointed by the mtge. bondholders, should have power to modify the scheme without confirmation by the bondholders. The scheme was sanctioned by the majority of the bondholders requisite under the trust deed. The required majority would not have been obtained but for the vote of the holder of a large number of bonds, whose support of the scheme was obtained by the promise of a large block of ordinary stock, an arrangement which was not mentioned in the scheme:—Held: the resolution was invalid, both because the bondholder in voting had not treated the interest of the whole class of bondholders as the dominant consideration, & because the scheme, so far as it provided for a committee, was ultra vires.—BRITISH AMERICA NICKEL CORPN. v. O'BRIEN, [1927] A. movable "plant used in or about the premises" for a term of about 996 years. The bank sent the indenture to the registrar of companies for registration under 1908 Act, s. 93. In the particulars required to be filed pursuant to that sect. the instrument was described as a mtge. of the leasehold premises, no mention being made of the chattels. The registrar entered the description of the instrument in the register in similar terms, identifying it by its date, & omitting all mention of any charge on the chattels. Subsequently the sheriff, in execution of a judgment recovered by deft. against the co., seized certain chattels of the co. upon the mortgaged premises, including certain motor vans. The bank claimed the goods in question under their mtge., & obtained from the registrar a certificate "that a mtge. or charge dated"—specifying the date & the parties to the instrument—"was registered pursuant to Cos. Act, s. 93." On an interpleader issue to try the title of the bank as against the execution creditor:—Held: as the certificate identified the instrument of charge, & stated that the mtge. or charge thereby created had been duly registered, it must be understood as certifying the due registration of all the charges created by the instrument, including that of the chattels, & it was conclusive evidence of the due registration of the chattels none the less because the register in omitting to mention them was not merely defective but misleading.—NATIONAL PROVINCIAL & UNION BANK OF ENGLAND v. CHARNLEY, [1924] 1 K. The contract provided that the purchase should be completed on or before Dec. 31, 1927. By clause 14 it was provided that the contract was subject to its being approved & sanctioned by the ct., & in the event of its not being so approved it was to become void, & the purchasers were to be entitled to be repaid their deposit. The receiver took no effective steps to obtain the sanction of the ct., & on Jan. 10, 1928, the purchasers' solrs. wrote to the debenture-holders' solrs. repudiating the contract & demanding the return of the deposit money under clause 14. In 1925 the co. issued a debenture by which it charged all its undertaking & all its property, present & future, including its uncalled capital in favour of the debenture holders. On Apr. 22, 1929, the co. gave notice to the landlords under above sect., requiring them to grant to it a new lease of the premises. In July, 1929, the debenture holders in exercise of the power on that behalf in the debenture appointed a receiver of the property & assets therein comprised. The landlords having failed to comply with the co.'s request for the grant of a new lease the receiver on Sept. 23, 1929, commenced an action in the county court in the name of the co. to obtain the grant of a new lease. On Oct. 15 a compulsory order was made to wind up the co. & a liquidator was appointed:—Held: the right to apply for a renewal of the lease under above sect. was a right given by the co. to the debenture holders as part of their security, & the receiver was entitled to enforce that right notwithstanding the liquidation of the co.—GOUGH'S GARAGES, LTD. v. PUGSLEY, [1930] 1 K. The liquidator moved in the county ct. for a declaration that the debentures were invalid either as a fraudulent preference under 1908 Act, s. 210, or as a floating charge created otherwise than for cash under sect. 212, & that the persons named in the debentures had no rights in respect of the sums expressed to be secured thereby except as unsecured creditors:—Held: the county ct. judge had jurisdiction to entertain the liquidator's application, &, as he had done so, his dis-

Act, 1910, of Barbados, as a public co., in order to carry on testator's business & to divide the profits of it between members of his family entitled under his will to share them; the managing director had a preponderating voting power. Upon a petition for winding up by shareholders who were not directors, it appeared that the directors had omitted to hold general meetings, or to submit accounts, or recommend a dividend, & that they had laid themselves open to the suspicion that their object in so omitting was to keep petitioners in ignorance of the co's. position & affairs & to acquire petitioners' shares at an under-value:—Held: the power to wind up the co. under sect. 127 (vi) of that Act [which was identical with 1908 Act, s. 129] was not confined to cases in which there were grounds analogous to those mentioned earlier in the sect.; & in the circumstances of the case, regard being had to the domestic character of the co., petitioners were entitled under that provision to a winding-up order.—LOCH v. BLACKWOOD (JOHN), LTD., [1924] A. Leave to appeal should not be granted, however, unless there appears to be some reason for doubting the validity of the judgment in review. "Future rights" in sub-sect. Duty of liquidator of private company.]—The question arose in this case whether resp. had shown through a private co. a title under which he had become the assign of leasehold premises within sect. 95 of St. John's Municipal Act, 1921, & as such entitled on the expiration of the term granted by the lease to compensation for the unexhausted value of improvements made during the term. Resp.'s title was faulty & certain transactions under which he traced his title from the private co. irregular, but he was held by the Supreme Ct. to be an assign, a private co. not being regarded as a corpn. distinct from the persons composing it & irregularities in connection with its liquidation being regarded as permissible :—Held : the duties & responsibilities of the liquidator of a private co. are as serious as of any other co., & a private co. is distinct from the persons composing it; a liquidator of a private co. was therefore not justified in paying the creditors merely a dividend on their debts when large surplus assets remained in hand, & in then allowing the contributories without any deed of assignment to take possession for themselves of the surplus assets, & for the future in Newfoundland such irregularities should be without judicial countenance. 6394a. —— ——.]—The society, under a loan stock trust deed, issued loan stock bearing interest at 7 per cent. with a quinquennial bonus of 2½ per cent. Under the trust deed, entered into by the society with trustees for the stockholders, an amount equal to 7½ per cent. on the par value of the stock was to be paid to the trustees, for apportionment to the interest & to a fund for the bonus. At the date of an order for the winding up of the society, most of the stockholders had received payment in full of interest at 7 per cent. on the amount of loan stock issued, up to & including a date seven months before the order. The trustees lodged with the liquidator a proof stated to be for cash advanced on loan; & this summons asked (i) whether the proof should be rejected to the extent of interest proved for above 7½ per cent. up to the date of the commencement of the winding up; (ii). whether interest should be calculated, at 5 per cent., to the date of the order or to the commencement of the winding up; & (iii) whether Bkpcy. Act, 1914 (c. 59), s. 66 (2) (b), had any application to proof or dividend in respect of the loan stock:—Held: (1) the amounts proved for by the trustees were to be computed only to the date of the commencement of the winding up; (2) Bkpcy. Act, 1914 (c. 59), s. 66, was not incorporated by 1908 Act, s. 207, so as to apply in the winding up of an insolvent co., & that the trustees' proof was therefore calculable at the rate of 7½ per cent.—Re Agricultural Wholesale Society, [1929] 2 Ch. 261; 98 L. Shortly afterwards, the provisional liquidator of the co., which was subsequently, in Apr. 1925, ordered to be wound up, paid to applt. the amount for which he had recovered judgment, & in Apr. 1926, an order was made in the winding up upon applt. to repay to the liquidator that amount, on the ground that the payment to him by the liquidator was void as a fraudulent preference. Later, it was voluntarily wound up, & B., the liquidator, agreed the L. Co.'s claim for a large sum, & paid dividends in respect of the claim. Following the practice of the co., B., notwithstanding the provisions of Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), & Marine Insurance Act, 1903 (c. 41), treated the agreement & the claim under it as valid. After the dissolution of the H. Co. he was advised that he should have disallowed the claim, & the dissolution was annulled, but an action to recover the money was dismissed, as no mistake of fact by B. was proved. On a misfeasance summons by a creditor of the co.:—Held: (1) a liquidator in the voluntary winding up of a limited co. is not, apart from negligence, liable for wrongly admitting a claim by an alleged creditor; (2) the liquidator did not, in the circumstances, fulfil his duty of investigating the claim of the L. Co., & was therefore liable as for misfeasance under Cos. Act, 1908, s. 215, for admitting the claim of the L. Co. since it was in fact an invalid one; (3) the Arts. of a limited co. cannot amount to a contract between the co. & its liquidator, & he could not therefore rely on an Art. absolving officers of the co. from liability except for fraud; (4) the position of a liquidator examining a proof for admission or rejection in a winding-up is the same as that of a trustee in bkpcy.; (5) in fixing the amount which a person liable for misfeasance under Cos. —— Judgment after winding up—Right of company to recover money from third party based on company's liability to judgment creditor—No ground for not staying execution.]—The manager of a co. fraudulently & without authority accepted bills of exchange in the co.'s name, & upon those bills the co. was sued to judgment by the holders. After the commencement of the action the co. went into voluntary liquidation. The co. subsequently recovered judgment in an action against a third party for damages for having wrongfully facilitated the commission of the above fraud, & for having thereby rendered the co. liable on the bills. The judgment creditors in the first action then sought to attach under a garnishee order the money so payable to the co. by the third party. On an application by the co. to stay the garnishee proceedings :—Held : where a judgment is recovered against a co. which is in voluntary liquidation the invariable practice of the ct. is to stay execution of the judgment unless there are very exceptional reasons for exercising its discretion otherwise, & the fact that the only right of the co. to recover the money claimed from the garnishees was based upon the co 's liability to the judgment creditors was not such an exceptional circumstance as to take the case out of the general rule.—ANGLO-BALTIC & MEDITERRANEAN BANK v. BARBER & CO., [1924] 2 K. 7551a. Winding-up of reinsurer—Claim against insuring company—Set-off.]—By a treaty of reinsurance dated Apr. 13, 1920, between two insurance cos. the reinsurer accepted a share of all insurances accepted by or renewed by the insuring co. in its fire department. By Art. VIII. of the treaty the insuring co. was entitled to retain & accumulate out of money due to the reinsurer a sum equal to 40 per cent. of the share of all premiums credited to the reinsurer in the first year, this sum to remain as a deposit to secure the due performance of the reinsurer's obligation. The insuring co. was to be entitled to retain the deposit, or any balance remaining after satisfying any obligation in respect of which the reinsurer might make default, until the determination of the agreement, paying the reinsurer interest at 3½ per cent. per annum on any part of the deposit not used in manner aforesaid. By Art. IX. the agreement was immediately determinable by notice on the reinsurer going into liquidation. On Jan. 31, 1922, the reinsurer presented its own winding up petition, & on Feb. 1, 1922, the insuring co. gave notice determining the agreement. On Feb. 14, 1922, a compulsory order was made for the winding up of the reinsurer. After all obligations under the treaty had been satisfied, there remained in the possession of the insuring co. a sum of over £8,000 out of the deposit & a sum of accrued interest. The liquidator of the reinsurer took out a summons for a declaration that the insuring co. was bound to pay over the deposit & interest in full. The insuring co. claimed to be entitled to set them off against sums due to it from the reinsurer under other treaties & policies of insurance & reinsurance:—Held: (1) the interest was a debt due from the insuring co. to the reinsurer & fell therefore within Bkpcy. Act, 1914 (c. 59), s. 31, as being one of a number of mutual credits or debts arising between the parties, & that there was therefore a right of set-off in regard to it; (2) the deposit being money handed over to the insuring co. for a specific purpose, the balance remaining after satisfying the specific purpose continued to be excluded from the course of account between the parties & could not be the subject of a set-off.—Re CITY EQUITABLE FIRE INSURANCE CO., LTD. 7611a. —— Former actuary—In receipt of pension.]—On the resignation of the actuary & secretary of an insurance co. which, in addition to other branches of insurance business, carried on the business of ordinary life assurance, both by the issue of policies upon human life & by the granting of annuities upon human life, the directors passed a resolution granting him a pension. The co. was subsequently ordered to be wound up compulsorily, & the late actuary, having lodged a proof in respect of his pension, died before the proof was dealt with:—Held: that the annuity was an annuity within the meaning of the Assurance Cos. Act, 1909 (c. 49), & must be valued, as at the date of the winding-up order, in the manner indicated in that statute.—Re PROFITS & INCOME INSURANCE CO., [1929] 1 Ch. 262; 98 L. J. Ch. 155; 140 L. 7953a. —— —— Extent of statutory powers as to preference shares.] A statutory co. under its special Acts with which Part II. of the Cos. Clauses Act, 1863 (c. 118), was incorporated, issued certain preference shares. By the conditions endorsed on the certificates it was provided that, in the event of the co. being wound up, the holders of the preference shares should be entitled to have the surplus assets applied, in the first place, in repaying to them the amount paid up on their preference shares, but should not be entitled to any further participation in such surplus assets :—Held : Cos. Clauses Act, 1863 (c. 118), ss. 13, 14, limited a co. to which Part II. of that Act applied in respect of their powers to attach rights of dividend to their preference shares, but did not limit a co. in respect of their powers to attach other privileges ; the privilege of having a priority as regards repayment of capital in a winding-up was a privilege which the co. was entitled to attach to the preference shares ; &, consequently, the further condition restricting the holders of preference shares in the case of a winding-up to repayment out of the surplus assets of the capital paid up on such shares was not ultra vires & was not invalid. —WINDERMERE DISTRICT GAS & WATER CO. v. WHITEHEAD, [1931] 1 Ch. 558 ; 100 L. 7858 i. "Unregistered company"—Benevolent society.]—A co. & its directors instituted & endowed a benevolent society, which was not registered under Friendly Societies Act, 1896, & made it a condition in the contract of employment of its manual labourers that they should be members of the society. In addition to income derived from the endowment fund, further income was provided, in terms of the constitution, by the members paying small weekly sums to the society, which were deducted from their wages, & by the co. paying an equal amount. The members & their dependants were respectively entitled to sickness & death benefits. The management was vested in a committee which was elected by the members in annual general meeting. The co., having been bought up by a larger concern, went out of business, & the works were eventually closed down. A special meeting of the society was thereafter held, at which it was resolved to cease receiving contributions & paying benefits. Subsequently certain officers of the society presented a petition for the winding up of the society as an "unregistered co." :—Held : the society was not a "partnership, assocn., or co." within Cos. Act, 1908, Part VIII., s. 267, in respect that there was no contractual relation between the members inter se, &, accordingly, that it could not be wound up under the Act as an "unregistered co."—Re CALEDONIAN EMPLOYEES' BENEVOLENT SOCIETY, [1928] S. 903. For the paragraph in the original volume substitute the following paragraph :—

—— —— —— —— ——.]—By the Lanchester Inclosure Act, 1773, the moors & commons of the manor of Lanchester, Durham, were divided & allotted. The Act provided that the lord of the manor & his assigns should have, hold & enjoy all mines & minerals within & under the allotments, with full & free liberty of searching for, draining, winning & working the mines & minerals by any ways or means then in use or thereafter to be invented as fully & freely as he might or could have had, held, used & enjoyed the same in case that Act had not been made without paying any damages or making any satisfaction for so doing ; & also that the annual rental of a certain allotment to the justices should be applied in or towards the compensation of those allottees whose allotments were damnified by the exercise of the lord's mining rights, & that any deficiency should be made up by means of a rate levied upon all the allottees :—Held : (1) the case was governed by the decision of the Ct. of Appeal in Consett Waterworks Co. v. Ritson, No. 901, ante, which was a decision on the identical question arising on the construction of the same Act & in the same circumstances, & although the reasoning upon which that decision was founded had been disapproved of by the House of Lords in Butterknowle Colliery Co. v. Bishop Auckland Industrial Co., No. 905, post, the decision itself had not been overruled & was therefore binding upon the ct., & defts. had a right to work the mines so as to let down the surface of the land without paying damages or making any compensation to pltfs.; (2) (YOUNGER, L.J.) the decision at which the Ct. of Appeal had felt itself compelled to arrive in deference to authority binding upon it might quite well have been reached on the construction of the Act itself apart altogether from the decision by which it was bound.—CONSETT INDUSTRIAL & PROVIDENT SOCIETY, LTD. v. CONSETT IRON CO., [1922] 2 Ch. 135; 91 L. 62a. ——.]—The Board of the Railway Comrs. for Canada made an order directing a railway co. to construct a subway so that, owing to the increased traffic the existing roadway should be lowered & pass under the railway instead of crossing it on the level, & ordering that detailed plans be filed for the approval of the chief engineer of the Board :—Held : (1) the subway was not part of the undertaking of the railway, so as to enable the co. to take possession of land under Expropriation Act, R. S. C., 1906 (c. 143), for the purpose of the railway proper, & the lowered road still remained part of the road belonging to the municipality; (2) detailed plans must be detailed plans of what was actually lodged as the general plan, & it was not within the liberty of the co. to enlarge the scope of the original plan & provide for a new access to the subway & the taking of land. 116a. —— Land not bonâ fide intended to be taken for purpose.]—Appits. had statutory power to acquire compulsorily land required for the purpose of making or extending streets, also land required for "carrying out improvements in or remodelling any portion of the city." In connection with the extension of a street, they resolved to acquire resps.' land for the latter purpose. They had previously been restrained from acquiring the land for the extension, on the ground that it was not really required for that purpose, but that its purchase was desired because of its probable increase in value. No plan for improving or remodelling the area was considered or proposed, & evidence as to proceedings in the council showed that appits. were endeavouring to give a new form to the transaction previously decided upon, rather than considering whether resps.' land was required for improving or remodelling :—Held : the evidence sustained the lower ct.'s conclusion of fact that appits. were exercising their powers for a purpose differing from those specified by the statute, & they had rightly been restrained from acquiring resps.' land.—SYDNEY MUNICIPAL COUNCIL v. CAMPBELL, [1925] A. 133a. —— For pleasure gardens & street widening—Part used for pleasure garden—May be subsequently used for street widening.]—A local authority bought land in 1896 for the purposes of: (1) street widening; (2) making new streets; (3) providing public walks & pleasure gardens. The land was conveyed to the local authority for the purposes authorised by the Public Health Acts. A plan & specifications were submitted to the Local Government Board, & subsequently the scheme was carried out in accordance with the plan & specifications. The pleasure gardens were surrounded by railings, & were not dedicated or open to the public. In 1927 the local authority resolved to utilise one of the pleasure grounds for the purpose of street widening & providing a parking place for motor cars. Objections were raised by some of the occupiers of adjoining premises, & an action was brought to restrain the local authority from carrying out their resolution: —Held: as one of the purposes for which the land was acquired was street widening, the local authority was not acting ultra vires in using part of the pleasure gardens for that purpose.—A.-G. v. SUNDERLAND CORPN., [1929] 2 Ch. 436; 45 T. 155a. —— Right to erect electric advertisement sign.]—The lessees of a hotel entered into two contracts with a firm of advertising agents, under the terms of which the latter were entitled to erect and exhibit, for a term of years, upon the roof of the hotel, electrically illuminated advertisements. An electric sign was duly erected. Before the expiration of the term the local authority, in exercise of its statutory powers, served the lessees with a notice to treat for the purchase of their estate & interest in the hotel, &, ultimately, having acquired the reversion to the lessees' term, took possession, closed the hotel, & began to demolish it. The electric sign was removed by arrangement with the advertising agents, who subsequently commenced an action against the lessees to recover damages for breach of the two contracts:—Held: the local authority had acquired defts.' interest in the premises by compulsion; the two contracts did not confer upon pltfs. any proprietary interest or estate in the hotel; &, as it could not be said that both parties to those contracts had made their bargain upon the footing that if the local authority exercised their powers & took the hotel the contracts were to be discharged, there must be a declaration that defts. were liable to pltfs. for damages for breach of those contracts.—WALTON HARVEY, LTD. v. WALKER & HOMFRAYS, LTD., [1931] 1 Ch. 274; 144 L. The municipality elected to exercise this privilege & an arbitration ensued in which the co. was awarded $74,000 & the award stated that $36,000 thereof was the value of the physical assets. The municipality, without complaining as to the amount awarded for the physical assets, objected to the allowance of the balance, which was referred to in letters between the solicitors as compensation for prospective profits:—Held: since the only right of the municipality was to take over, not merely the physical assets, but the undertaking as a whole, including its privileges, the appeal should be dismissed.—CUMBERLAND (CITY) v. CUMBERLAND ELECTRIC LIGHT CO., LTD., [1931] 2 W. They had made on the promontories a bathing house & wharf, both of which they used in connection with the school, but no legal right of way across the railway was proved. The Crown took the two promontories for a public purpose, & upon an area wholly to the east of the railway, & including the two small promontories, made a large railway shunting yard. A claim by applts. to compensation for the damage to their property on the west of the railway by reason of the construction of the shunting yard having been rejected:—Held: the possession & control of the two promontories gave an enhanced value to applts.' land on the west side of the railway, & in respect of depreciation in value of those lands due to the anticipated legal use of works which might be constructed upon the two promontories, applts. were owners whose lands had been injuriously affected, & accordingly they were entitled to compensation; further, the ct. in assessing the compensation should have regard to the anticipated use of the promontories as part of a shunting yard, not to the actual use at the time of the assessment.—ROCKINGHAM SISTERS OF CHARITY v. R., [1922] 2 A. 263a. ——— ———.]—By a private Act the President of the Air Council was authorised to enter upon, take & use all or any of certain lands, & also to construct a certain new thoroughfare. By sect. 2 he was authorised to stop up a portion of a certain lane known as Plough-lane. By sect. 5, "subject as hereinafter provided the Lands Clauses Acts are for the purpose of the acquisition of land under this Act incorporated with this Act." Then followed several exceptions, which did not specify sect. 68 of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, which deals with injurious affection. Lands were taken by the President under the special Act, & the said portion of Plough-lane was stopped up.

The claimant owned a dwelling-house in Plough-lane, not the part stopped up. No lands of the claimant were taken by the President under the Act, but his premises were depreciated in value to the extent of £100, through the stopping up of a portion of Plough-lane, rendering his premises less accessible in one direction. The claimant claimed compensation in respect of the stopping up of this portion of Plough-lane. On the hearing of an award in the form of a special case stated by an official arbitrator under Acquisition of Land (Assessment of Compensation) Act, 1919 (c. 57), s. 6 (1), it was contended for the President of the Air Council that the claimant had no right to claim compensation on the ground that no portion of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, was incorporated with the special Act as regards sect. 2 thereof, which was not a sect. for the purpose of the acquisition of land, but one merely authorising the closing of a thoroughfare ; & also on the ground that sect. 68 of the Act of 1845 was not incorporated with the Special Act as its provisions for "injurious affection" were not for the acquisition of land. The official arbitrator asked the following question of the ct. : Was the claimant entitled to be paid compensation in respect of the stopping up of this portion of Plough-lane ? The ct. answered the question in the affirmative.—WRIGHT v. AIR COUNCIL, PRESIDENT (1929), 143 L. T. 43.

The bridge, when built, constituted an obstruction to the navigation & interfered with access to the wharf, so that goods destined for the wharf had to be transhipped from sea-going vessels into barges below the bridge, & the owners of the wharf had to acquire a new wharf below the bridge. 650a. —— Acquisition of land & appointment of arbitrator under Public Health Act, 1875, (c. 55.)]—A land co. was the owner in fee simple of certain land through which a sewerage board, under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), after duly serving on the co. notice of intention to do so, carried a sewer & a rising main. Subsequently an agreement in writing was entered into between the parties regarding what had been done. Differences having arisen regarding the compensation to be paid by the board to the co., recourse was had to arbn. The arbitrator was appointed under Public Health Act, 1875, & before entering on the arbn. made the statutory declaration under that Act. Having considered the disputes he made an alternative award in the form of a special case for the opinion of the ct. If the ct. was of opinion that compensation was to be assessed solely under Public Health Act, 1875, he awarded the co. £5,090; if the arbitration was under Acquisition of Land (Assessment of Compensation) Act, 1919 (c. 57), & the basis on which compensation was to be awarded was to be governed by the principles in s. 2 of that Act, he awarded the co. £2,148:—Held: as the land had been acquired under powers conferred by Public Health Act, 1875, before the agreement between the parties was entered into, it had been acquired compulsorily, & as there was nothing in the agreement which affected the primary basis of the value of the land nor any other matter, including the appointment of the arbitrator expressly under Public Health Act, 1875, which was inconsistent with the rules laid down by s. 2 of the Act of 1919, that Act applied to the arbn., & the co. should be awarded £2,148.—THURROCK, GRAYS & TILBURY JOINT SEWERAGE BOARD v. THAMES LAND CO., LTD. 773a. Award of lump sum—Validity.]—Claimant was the owner of certain land with regard to the acquisition of which an arbn. was held under Acquisition of Land (Assessment of Compensation) Act, 1919 (c. 57). He claimed £17,362, &, before the hearing of the arbn., the President of the Air Council made an unconditional offer of £10,000. The sum awarded to claimant by the official arbitrator in respect of his interest in the land & the consequential damage thereto was £11,415. In dealing with the costs the arbitrator directed the Council "to pay £100 towards the costs of claimant." Claimant applied to the ct. by motion for the award to be remitted to the arbitrator on the ground that he had, in making the above order as to costs, not properly exercised the discretion conferred upon him by sect. 5 (4) of the above Act:—Held: in awarding the lump sum of £100, the arbitrator had in terms awarded to claimant part of his costs of the arbn. within sect. 5, & as it seemed reasonably clear from the Act that, when a sum was awarded by the arbitrator in excess of the amount offered by the authority but less than the sum which claimant had offered to accept, the arbitrator had an absolute discretion as to the costs, the motion to review the award failed.—BRADSHAW v. AIR COUNCIL, [1926] Ch. 329; 95 L. ar. General rules.]—The rights conferred by a lease being a matter of property & civil rights, within the exclusive powers of the provincial legislature, the ct. in ascertaining the estate or interest of persons claiming compensation thereunder in an expropriation by the Dominion Crown, will have regard to the laws affecting such estate or interest in the province where the property is situated, notwithstanding Expropriation Act, ss. 25, 26. The compensation to be made to the lessee for the unexpired term of his lease should cover all reasonable cost of moving, refitting & settling the new premises; loss of time in seeking new location; depreciation of valuable business fixtures & fittings & damage thereto due to moving, etc., & a certain amount for dislocation or disturbance of business, which, however, cannot be fixed with mathematical certainty. 17a. —— —— ——.] — Pltfs. were an English limited co. of engineers & merchants. Part of its business was transacted in Russia, & for the purpose of that business pltfs., through their London bankers, deposited moneys & Russian Treasury Bonds with the Petrograd branch of the Banque de Commerce de l'Azoff-Don. Having done so, pltfs. took out two policies of insurance to insure themselves against loss or damage to the insured property "directly caused by fire, rioters, civil commotions, war, civil war, revolutions, rebellions, military or usurped power. . . ." No claim was to attach under the policy (inter alia) "for confiscation or destruction by the Govt. of the country in which the property is situated." In Dec. 1917, during the currency of the policy, the Banque de Commerce was occupied by soldiers & sailors of the Red Guard, & by the Bolshevists, purporting to act under the authority of an executive committee of the Commissaries of the People. They demanded & obtained control & possession of the bank & everything contained in it, including the insured property. Two actions were brought claiming for losses under the policies, & the question arose with regard to the recognition of the Soviet Govt. as a sovereign power:—Held : on the information then available, the act of the military in seizing the insured property was an act of confiscation by the Govt. of Russia which was in existence at the material time, & had since been recognised by His Majesty's Govt. as the de facto Govt. of Russia, & was not an act of a usurped authority; therefore the claim failed by reason of the clause which provided that no claim was to attach under the policy ". . . for confiscation or destruction by the Govt. of the country in which the property is situated."—WHITE, CHILD & BENEY, LTD. v SIMMONS, WHITE, CHILD & BENEY, LTD. v. EAGLE STAR & BRITISH DOMINIONS INSURANCE CO. In 1901 he married resp., an American lady, & in 1902 they went to Quebec where he carried on the business of manufacturing arms. They lived together there till 1917 with occasional visits to England. In 1917 applt. went to Washington, staying there as an expert adviser on munitions till Sept. 1918, when he stayed a certain time in Great Britain & in 1918 leased a house in London. In 1922 he took a lease of a flat in New York of which he remained tenant when these proceedings for divorce began in Dec. 1923. Up to the year 1920 there was no statement by applt. of his intention to abandon his Scottish domicil, & as late as Dec. 1920, he stated in an affidavit that he was a domiciled Scotchman. Between Dec. 1920, & the institution of these proceedings he was trying for the purposes of taxation to become a resident alien in the United States, & in Apr. 1923, succeeded. In Jan. 1924, after these proceedings he sought to be naturalised as an American citizen. He spent increasing periods of time at his Scottish estate & referred to it as his home in a letter written to resp. in Nov. 1922. Since 1920, however, he had made statements in documents & verbally that he intended to live permanently in New York, though such statements were never made to his wife, nor, with one exception, to any personal friend:—Held: the evidence of declared intention of change of domicil was not established, as such declarations must be examined by considering the person to whom, the purposes for which, & the circumstances in which they were made, & be carried into effect by conduct & action consistent with the declared intention.—ROSS v. ELLISON (OR ROSS), [1930] A. 51 ii. —— ——.] — A domicil of origin differs from a domicil of choice mainly in this, that its character is more enduring, its hold stronger & less easily shaken off. Such a domicil continues unless it is shown with perfect clearness & satisfaction that there was a fixed & settled purpose to acquire a new domicil. This onus is a heavy one, & is upon those who assert a change of domicil.—Re MURRAY'S ESTATE, [1921] 3 W. W. R. 874; 31 Man. L. R. 362.—CAN.

51 iii. —— ——.]—A domicil of origin is not easily shaken off. Mere absence from home, roving & wandering, however long pursued, are not in themselves sufficient to effect a change; to do so there must be a fixed & settled purpose to abandon the domicil of origin & to settle in the country of choice.—BARRY v. JAMES (1921), Times, Apr. 29; [1921] 3 W. 88a. —— ——.]—It being settled that a change of domicil must be made animo et facto, the animus may be inferred by the factum of residence within the new domicil, but in order to warrant that inference the quality of the residence must be taken into account ; mere length of residence is not of itself sufficient.

A testator who died in Liverpool in 1927, aged eighty-two & unmarried, left a holograph will, valid by the law of Scotland but invalid by the law of England. Testator's domicil of origin was Scottish, & he lived the greater part of his life in Glasgow. Originally employed there as a commercial traveller he gave up that employment in 1882 & never worked again. In 1892 he went to Liverpool to be near a brother & sister, & lived there for the last thirty-five years of his life. He was supplied with the means of subsistence by his brother & sister, & on the death of his sister he succeeded to the whole of her estate. With the exception of family ties he had few, if any, ties in either England or Scotland. In an action by beneficiaries under the will against testator's next of kin for a declaration that testator was domiciled in Scotland at the date of his death :—Held : in the absence of independent evidence of an intention on the part of testator to change his domicil, the burden which lay on the next of kin of proving that he had abandoned his domicil of origin had not been discharged.—BOWIE OR RAMSAY v. LIVERPOOL ROYAL INFIRMARY, [1930] A. 155a. —— Material consideration.]—D., who was born in Edinburgh in 1858, went out to Calcutta, India, in 1875 & worked in his uncle's cotton mills, becoming a partner in his uncle's firm in 1880. In 1883 he returned for a few months, but from 1883 to 1900 remained working in India, making his business his life. He seldom went into society, but was fond of Indians, & chiefly associated with them. In 1900 he returned to England & married his cousin, & took her out with him to Calcutta in 1901, but, the climate not suiting her, she returned in Nov. 1901, to England. From Jan. 1903 to 1910, he paid visits for a substantial time each year to be with his wife in England, where he had bought a house. In 1903 a child was born. From Jan. 1912 to Nov. 1915, D. remained in England, being, it was said, detained by litigation. In 1916 his wife went out to Calcutta, & she & her daughter lived with her husband in his flat over his offices. She returned with her daughter after two months. In 1917 D. followed his wife home, & until his death on July 3, 1928, remained in England, except for short visits to India in 1919, 1920, 1922, 1924, & 1925. In his will dated June 28, 1922, he made a declaration of Indian domicile. On his death, the Crown, on the ground that he was domiciled in the United Kingdom, claimed death duties on his estate, the value of which was many millions of pounds. On the question whether, as the exors. of the will alleged, he had acquired a domicile of choice in India & lost his domicile of origin :—Held : the earlier period of D.'s life up to the year 1900 could not be estimated in deciding whether he had acquired a domicile of choice in India in a compartment separate from his later years, & the declaration in his will did not decide the point, but where his wife & children had their permanent residence was material as to a man's domicile. There was a distinction between residence & domicile, & it could not be inferred from the fact of residence that domicile resulted. On the facts there was no clear evidence, as was necessary, of any manifest & concluded intention of change of domicile to overcome the domicile of origin. Therefore the onus of proof of a domicile of choice was not discharged, & D. died domiciled in the United Kingdom.—A.-G. v. YULE & MERCANTILE BANK OF INDIA (1931), 145 L. T. 9, C. A.

417a. —— —— ——.]—The Q. Co. was a co. incorporated & carrying on business in Queensland. In Sept. 1886, the Q. Co. issued & deposited with the U. Bank, as security for moneys due & to become due, two debentures, the one for £10,000, & the other for £50,000; both debentures assigned the uncalled capital of the co., & were, as the ct. held, valid according to the law of Queensland. In Dec. 1886 the Q. Co. made a call of £50 a share payable in four instalments, in Feb., Apr., June, & Aug. 1887. The co. had many shareholders domiciled in Scotland & some in England. On Oct. 20, 1887, an order was made for winding up the co. in Queensland, & on June 14, 1888, a similar order was made in England. On Feb. 24, 1887, the A. Co., a co. domiciled in Scotland, commenced proceedings in Scotland to recover from the Q. Co. large sums entrusted to them for investment. Immediately after the institution of the action the call moneys due under the call made by the Q. Co. as above, from shareholders resident in Scotland, were arrested by the Scotch process called arrestment on the dependence of the action. Proceedings in this action were restrained by the High Ct. in England on Feb. 24, 1888, on the motion of the English liquidator of the Q. Co., but the order was expressly made without prejudice to the security, if any, upon the amounts payable by the Scotch shareholders in the Q. Co. which the A. Co. had acquired by their proceedings, & the amounts received from the Scotch shareholders were directed to be carried by the liquidator to a separate account. On Sept. 6, 1889, an order was made in the Queensland winding up allowing the claim of the A. Co. for £12,662 4*s.* 5*d.* The U. Bank, whose claim against the Q. Co. had been allowed for £74,000, but who had valued their security at £31,000, took out a summons claiming that the liquidator should pay over to the bank all the moneys in his hands representing proceeds of the said call. The A. Co. claimed to be paid in priority out of the money received from Scotch shareholders. The evidence stated that, according to the law of Scotland, the arrestment had the effect of attaching the fund in favour of the creditor obtaining it, & upon the decree being pronounced in the suit the security would become complete, & that such an arrestment operated as an assignment of the fund duly intimated; that an admission of the sum due in the winding up of a co. was for this purpose equivalent to a decree; & that, according to the law of Scotland, in order to create a competent security over incorporeal personal property, the assignment thereof must be duly intimated to the debtor:—Held: without deciding the point whether the maxim "Mobilia sequuntur personam" made the assignment of the calls by the Q. Co. domiciled in Queensland valid in Scotland, the case was governed by the principle that, if a transfer of personal property is carried out validly according to the law of the country where the property is situated, it cannot be made invalid by anything in the law of the assignor's domicil; & as the evidence proved that the arrestment operated as an assignment by the Q. 457a. ——.]—(1) The succession to movable property, wherever situate, is governed by the law of testator's domicil, that is to say, the whole law of the country of domicil, including the rules of private international law administered by its tribunals. The inquiry in an English ct. before which such a question of succession comes is, therefore, what the cts. of the country of domicil would decide in the particular case. The result is that, where by the law of the domicil the succession to the movables of a testator depends on the law of that testator's nationality, an English ct. will hold that the succession is governed by the law of the nationality & not by the municipal law of the domicil.

Testator died in France, & his will was proved in England. Two of the residuary legatees died in his lifetime, but neither left any issue. There was no realty & the property comprising the residue was in England. The residuary legatees were all English. On a summons the domicil of testator at his death was held to be French. By French law there was no lapse of the shares of those legatees who had died, & the survivors were entitled :—Held : the domicil being French & there being no sufficient indication in the will, either express or implied, that testator desired that it should be construed by English law, the primâ facie general rule applied, & the will must be construed by French law.—Re CUNNINGTON, HEALING v. WEBB, [1924] 1 Ch. 68; 93 L. Part VII.—Contracts.

639. To the cross-reference before this case add "No. 1981a."

639a. ——.]—Pltf. was received by defts., a British co., under a contract made in Detroit, to be carried in one of their steamships from New York to Southampton. The contract contained a clause that the shipowners should not be liable for loss, damage or delay to a passenger or his baggage arising from the acts of God, or from causes of any kind beyond the carrier's control, even though the loss, damage or delay might have been caused by the neglect or default of the shipowners' servants. It was further provided that all questions arising under the clause should be decided according to English law. A subsequent clause provided that no claim under the contract should be enforceable against the shipowners unless a written notice thereof was delivered to them within three days after the passenger should be landed from the steamer at the termination of her voyage. In the course of the voyage one of pltf.'s hands was injured by reason of the negligence of defts.' servants, but no written notice of any claim was given by pltf. within the time limited by the contract :—Held : the language of the contract showed that it was the intention of the parties that it should be wholly governed by English law ; the clause relieving defts. from liability for the negligence of their servants, though void by the law in force in Detroit, was valid & enforceable, by English law, but, applying the ejusdem generis rule, the clause did not absolve defts. from liability for pltf.'s injury.—JONES v. OCEANIC STEAM NAVIGATION CO., LTD., [1924] 2 K. 640a. Agreement for contract to be subject to foreign law—Contract cancelled by decree of foreign Government.]—In May, 1903, pltf. took out a 20 year endowment life insurance policy with defts. for 10,000 roubles payable at defts.' office in St. Petersburgh, & by the terms of the policy all premiums were to be paid in Russia. Pltf. paid all the premiums in Russia down to 1917, & then in London down to 1919. By the terms of an Imperial Decree of the Russian Empire, dated July 7, 1889, which were incorporated in the policy, it was provided (inter alia) that all disputes in connection with insurance operations should be settled according to Russian laws & in Russian cts. of justice. By a Monopolisation Decree of the Russian Soviet Govt., dated Dec. 1918, insurance in all its forms was declared a State monopoly, & in Nov. 1919, a Decree of Cancellation abolished life assurance altogether in the Soviet Republic, & all existing contracts were annulled. In those circumstances pltf., who was prevented by the above decrees of 1918 & 1919 from suing on the policy in Russia, brought an action in England for a declaration that defts. were liable to him under the policy :—Held : the proper law of the contract was, according to the policy rules, the law of Russia, & the effect of the Cancellation Decree of Nov. 1919, was that the contract, if in fact there was any contractual nexus left in existence between the parties after the Monopolisation Decree of 1918 came into force, was annulled, & pltf. could not recover on it.—PERRY v. EQUITABLE LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY OF U.S.A. The ship duly called at F., & was ordered to proceed to an English port to discharge:—Held: as the intention of the parties as to what law should govern was to be gathered from the circumstances of the case, &, as the giving of the orders fixed the seat of the contract in England, the law of England applied.—THE WILHELM SCHMIDT (1871), 25 L. In an action brought for distance freight by pltfs. as trustees for the shipowners, pltfs. admitted that by English law distance freight was not recoverable, but they contended that the law applicable was either the law of the flag, namely, Swedish law, or the law of Egypt, where the contract was made:—Held: there was a primâ facie presumption that the law of the flag applied unless the parties intended otherwise, but in view of convenience the parties must have intended the English law to apply, & therefore the action failed.—THE ADRIATIC, [1931] P. 241.

703a. —— —— Policy effected in England by foreigner—With foreign company through English office.]—Pltf. co. was incorporated by special Act of the Legislature of New York, & had its central office & the bulk of its assets in New York. The co. had a branch in London & in most of the capitals of Europe, the branch in Paris being its head office for Europe. The general manager of the London branch had no general authority to issue policies in this country. Certain life policies signed by the president & secretary of the co. & countersigned by the general manager for Europe, were issued in London to German nationals before the outbreak of the war. The policies were not under seal. The policy moneys were expressed to be payable in London, but all premiums were payable either at the central office in New York or at the office where the insurance was payable, & proofs of death were to be furnished at the New York office. An indorsement on the policy provided that it should be construed according to English law:—Held: it was permissible & necessary to look at the terms of the contracts & to determine from them at what place the debts would be recoverable; applying that test in the present case, the debts were recoverable in London where they were expressed to be payable.—NEW YORK LIFE INSURANCE CO. v. PUBLIC TRUSTEE, [1924] 2 Ch. 101; 93 L. 705a. Insurance against loss by forged document—Governed by English law—Insurance in London—Business carried on in New York.]—Pltfs., who carried on business in New York, took out a policy of insurance in London against loss which they might incur by having acted upon any document which might prove "to have been forged." During the currency of the policy pltfs. were induced to lend money to a firm by a document containing a false statement of the firm's assets & liabilities. Before the whole of the loan had been repaid the firm became bkpt., & the pltfs. sued an underwriter on the policy. By the law of the State of New York forgery includes "a false statement of financial condition." A member of the firm had since been convicted in New York of forgery. Pltfs. contended that the word "forged" in the policy must be construed by the law of New York where the loss occurred, & that therefore it was immaterial if the document was not a forgery according to English law:—Held: even if the document was a forged document according to the law of New York the word "forged" was used in the policy merely to describe an existing state of fact & not as a term of art to be construed according to the law of the place where the loss happened, & accordingly the action failed.—EQUITABLE TRUST CO. 803a. —— —— Facilities for dissolution under local law immaterial.]—Marriage is a voluntary union for life of one man & one woman to the exclusion of all others, & where a marriage in a foreign country complies with these requirements it is immaterial that under the local law dissolution can be obtained by mutual consent or at the will of either party with merely formal conditions of official registration.

A man & a woman, both domiciled Russians, entered in Russia into a contract accepted by the local law as one of marriage. The marriage could, according to the same law, be dissolved by mutual consent or at the will of one of the parties, with merely formal conditions of official registration :—Held : on an issue directed in a suit by the woman for judicial separation, that as the union so formed was of one man to one woman to the exclusion of all others, it constituted a valid marriage according to English law, notwithstanding that it could, according to the local law, be dissolved as stated above.—NACHIMSON v. NACHIMSON, [1930] P. 217; 99 L. 918a. —— ——.]—It is established by the cases of Armytage v. Armytage, No. 917, ante, & Anghinelli v. Anghinelli, No. 918, ante, that, according to the practice of the ecclesiastical cts., a suit for judicial separation, which is now substituted for the divorce a mensâ et thoro, can be entertained in a case where both parties are resident but not domiciled within the jurisdiction. But the ct. has no jurisdiction to maintain a suit against a resp. who at the time of his citation or of the institution of the suit is resident out of the jurisdiction. Statute of Citations, 1531 (c. 9), s. 2, which forbade the ecclesiastical cts. to cite any person out of the diocese where he was inhabiting or dwelling, must be taken to have limited the jurisdiction & not only the power of service of the ecclesiastical cts.; & Matrimonial Causes Act, 1857 (c. 85), which permits service within or without His Majesty's Dominions, cannot extend the jurisdiction.—GRAHAM v. GRAHAM, [1923] P. 31; 92 L. 926a. Parties domiciled in country where decree sought—Validity of marriage in dispute.]—(1) Where the validity of a marriage is in dispute the ct. of the domicil of the parties has jurisdiction, whether it is an exclusive jurisdiction or not, to pronounce a decree of nullity of marriage.

(2) A decree of nullity of marriage pronounced by a ct. of competent jurisdiction, whatever be the ground of the decree, is a judgment determining status & is equivalent to a judgment in rem.

(3) Where the parties are domiciled in a foreign country a decree of nullity of marriage pronounced by a competent ct. of that country will, in the absence of fraud or collusion, be recognised as binding & conclusive by the cts. of England & Scotland, unless it offends against British notions of substantial justice.—SALVESEN (OR VON LORANG) v. AUSTRIAN PROPERTY ADMINISTRATOR, [1927] A. 946a. Foreign court without jurisdiction to grant decree of nullity.]—The disability of a foreigner to marry in England otherwise than in accordance with the law of his country as regards matters of form is a disability of which he can divest himself at will & therefore constitutes no objection to the validity of a marriage contracted by him in England in English form. A decree of a foreign ct. invalidating such a marriage is recognisable in England only if the foreign ct. has jurisdiction over the marriage & even then is open to examination. Want of jurisdiction cannot be cured by mere consent of the parties. A decree of a foreign ct. purporting to annul an English marriage under these circumstances is not severable, & if it is incompetent to annul the marriage, neither is it competent to award maintenance or a lump sum in lieu of maintenance.

The husband, a domiciled Cypriot, married a Frenchwoman in England in English form. Afterwards he repudiated the marriage on the ground that it was not in form in accordance with the law of his domicil. Later, on proceedings by the wife in a Cypriot ct., the marriage was declared null on the same ground by consent of the parties, & it was further declared that the husband should pay the wife a lump sum in satisfaction of all claims, including maintenance. The Cypriot ct. by the terms of its constitution had no jurisdiction to annul a marriage. Still later, the wife, finding the husband in England, took out a summons against him for neglect to maintain her under the Summary Jurisdiction (Separation & Maintenance) Acts, 1895 to 1925. The summary jurisdiction ct., upholding the marriage, ordered the husband to pay maintenance :—Held : the marriage was good & the agreement to set it aside illegal, that the decree of the ct. in Cyprus was pronounced without jurisdiction in compromising maintenance as well as in annulling the marriage, & that the order of the ct. of summary jurisdiction must stand, the measure of maintenance within the limits of the Summary Jurisdiction Act being the means of the parties at the time of the proceedings.—PAPADOPOULOS v. PAPADOPOULOS, [1930] P. 55; 99 L. was set up that the matter had been litigated in the French ct., which had given judgment for defts., & that the judgment was a bar to the action. Pltfs. replied that the judgment was obtained by proceedings contrary to natural justice. 1307a. Garnishee proceedings — Payment of debt situate in England — Recognised by international law.]—Judgment having been recovered against a foreign corpn., who submitted to the jurisdiction, a garnishee summons was issued to attach a debt due from a London bank to the foreign corpn.:—Held: the judgment creditors were entitled to have an order nisi made absolute, inasmuch as payment under a garnishee order operated as a discharge of the amount paid & was recognised by international law as having that effect. & consequently there was no real risk of the garnishees being obliged to pay the debt over again to the foreign corpn., & there was, therefore, nothing inequitable in making the order absolute.

The debt in this case is situate in England, & is discharged in whole or in part by payment under a garnishee order in England, which is not mere procedure & is recognised in international law (BANKES, L.J.).—SWISS BANK CORPN. v. BOEHMISCHE INDUSTRIAL BANK, [1923] 1 K. sm. By registration of English High Court judgment—No submission to jurisdiction.]—In a suit for divorce in the Divorce Div. of the High Ct. of Justice in England, an appearance was entered by London agents, on behalf of a co-respondent residing in New Zealand, in error & without any instructions to that effect. On an application to have the judgment for costs of the High Ct. registered in the Supreme Ct. so that it might be enforced in New Zealand:—Held: (1) co-respondent did not voluntarily appear or otherwise submit or agree to submit to the jurisdiction of that ct.; (2) even if such entry of appearance did amount to submitting to the High Ct.'s jurisdiction, it would not be just & convenient for the judgment to be enforced in New Zealand.—REDHEAD v. REDHEAD & CROTHERS, [1926] N. Z. L. R. 131.—N.Z.

so. Reciprocal Enforcement of Judgments Act, 1925—Scope of Act.]—Reciprocal Enforcement of Judgments Act, 1925, does not permit the registration of a judgment obtained in a province or territory of the Dominion of Canada to which the Act applies unless the judgment is one which could be enforced by action thereon in Alberta. The Act does not make the judgments to which it applies any less "foreign" judgments or any more directly enforceable than before the Act was passed, & does not alter the rules of private international law as to the recognition to be given to foreign judgments. Therefore a judgment obtained in another province, under the rules thereof permitting service ex juris, against a deft. who was not resident or present in that province & did not submit to the jurisdiction of the ct. by contract or appearance is not one which is registrable under the Act. A partnership is not a "person," within the meaning of the Act, against whom a judgment may be registered.—CANADIAN CREDIT MEN'S TRUST ASSOCN., LTD. v. RYAN (Alta.), [1930] 1 D. L. Pltf. in his affidavit sworn on Jan. 30, on which the order was granted, stated that deft. had arrived in Toronto that morning, & that he intended to leave for his own country that night, with intent to defraud pltf. of the damages he had sustained:—Held: in leaving Ontario he was not doing so with intent to defraud pltf., & was therefore entitled to be discharged.—RICE v. FLETCHER (1889), 13 P. In 1923 an action was brought in England to recover a debt alleged to be due from defts. to pltfs., the writ being served on C., & in default of appearance judgment was signed against defts. Pltfs. having obtained a garnishee order nisi to attach a debt due to defts. from third parties in England:—Held: as the debt owing from the garnishees to defts. was governed by English law, payment by the garnishees of the amount of the judgment debt would be a discharge pro tanto of the debt due from them to defts., & it must be assumed that the Soviet Govt. would follow the ordinary rules of international comity & admit the validity of that payment, & the garnishee order ought to be made absolute.—SEDGWICK COLLINS & CO. v. ROSSIA INSURANCE CO. 1309a. —— Rights of mortgagee of ship under French hypothèque—Claim for necessaries.]—According to French law, the mtgee. of a ship under a French hypothèque, although he has not the same right of property as that given by Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (c. 60), in respect of an English mtge., has a right to arrest the ship in the hands of a subsequent owner. His claim, however, is postponed to that of a necessaries man.

On a motion to determine priorities between English claimants, in respect of necessary repairs effected upon a French ship & claimants under a French hypothèque upon the ship:—Held: as the rights under the hypothèque must be determined according to French law, which gave greater rights than those given by English law to a necessaries man who had merely the right to sue in rem, the claim of the necessaries men, according to the lex fori by which the question of priorities must be determined, was postponed to the claim of the mtgees.—THE COLORADO, [1923] P. 102; 92 L. In Dec. the owners of the M. discontinued their cross-action in Egypt:—Held: if the cross-action had still been pending the owners of the M. might have been put to their election, but as they had already elected there was no justification for staying the action in England, merely because they were defts. to an action in another country in respect of the same subject-matter.—THE JANERA, [1928] P. 55; 97 L. Before the action in America had been brought to trial pltfs. issued a fresh writ in rem in England, & on Feb. 27, 1926, re-arrested the ship in the Thames. On Mar. 4 defts. served notice of motion to set aside the writ & all subsequent proceedings in the English action. The American action was discontinued on Mar. 8 :—Held : having obtained bail & so released the ship from any further claim in respect of the particular damage alleged, pltfs.' subsequent discontinuance of the action in America after the re-arrest in England did not cure their breach of good faith in instituting proceedings in England & causing the ship to be arrested again, & the writ & all subsequent proceedings must be set aside.—THE GOLAA, [1926] P. 103; 95 L. 1383a. —— —— ——.]—On June 13, 1922, a British steamer & a Finnish steamer were in collision in the river Maas, Holland. After the collision the Finnish owners threatened arrest in a Dutch port. The owners of the British steamer who were anxious that the litigation should take place in England, reluctantly instructed their agents in Holland to provide bail, & although no proceedings were begun, documents in identical terms in the nature of bank guarantees to provide bail if proceedings were commenced within three months were exchanged on July 29 between the owners. On Sept. 6 the Finnish vessel came within the jurisdiction of the English cts., & an action was commenced, & the ship arrested & bail given under protest at the suit of the owners of the British ship. At that time no proceedings had been begun in Holland, but on Sept. 14 an action was commenced in Holland by the Finnish owners. The Finnish owners moved that the writ & all proceedings in the action by the British owners should be stayed, on the ground that their action was oppressive because it required the Finnish owners to give bail in two cts., & was inequitable as a breach of faith of the agreement in Holland :—Held : no legal proceedings having been commenced when the writ was issued in England, & there being no arrest & no bail given prior to the writ now sought to be set aside, there was nothing to debar the British owners from carrying on proceedings in England.—THE JUNO (1922), 128 L. A.-G. by & through his delegated representative had unconstitutionally misapplied the powers delegated to him, in that the purpose of his proceedings was to aid a criminal prosecution, something which was not contemplated by the Act, with the result that the federal field had been just as much invaded, even if indirectly, as if the primary invasion had been accomplished directly by the passing of an Act which in its terms was a violation of the B. 293a. Indemnity Act as defence.]—In 1918 the suppliant, who was then a jewelry dealer in Petrograd, deposited certain jewelry with the British consul, who was in charge of the embassy premises, & owing to difficulties in the way of the consular officers obtaining money the suppliant agreed that the consul might sell the jewelry & use the proceeds for His Majesty's service. The jewelry was put in a locked leather bag kept in a safe at the embassy. Persons claiming to be representatives of the Soviet Govt. entered the embassy & arrested everybody, & afterwards the bag was found to have been cut open & the contents taken. In 1926 the suppliant claimed the value of the jewelry, but the Foreign Secretary repudiated liability, & the suppliant brought a petition of right. The A.-G., by demurrer, submitted that there was no ground of claim as the facts disclosed showed the absence of negligence, &, secondly, he put in an answer & plea that the claim was barred by the Indemnity Act, 1920 (c. 48) :—Held : (1) the facts stated in the petition did not negative the possibility of the proof of negligence & the demurrer must be overruled; (2) the claim was barred by the Indemnity Act, 1920 (c. 48), & there must be judgment for the Crown on the answer & plea relating to that Act.—BUCKNALL v. R. C. had not been sent by his employer, had no business there & went solely to amuse himself. C. had been drinking & was under the influence of liquor. He was making a nuisance of himself & when told to go, got into his car and drove straight into the canal, & all were drowned :—Held : as C. had no business on the wharf on the evening of the accident & was there by tolerance, the Crown under such circumstances was under no obligation or duty to him. 348a. —— In proceedings under Patents & Designs Acts.]—Appcts. applied by originating summons under Patents & Designs Act, 1907 (c. 29), s. 29, as amended by Patents & Designs Act, 1919 (c. 80), s. 8, for an inquiry as to the remuneration proper to be paid to them for the user by a Govt. department of the patented invention of which they were the registered owners. In the course of the proceedings, preliminary to hearing of the motion, orders were made in which the litigation was treated, with the acquiescence of both litigants, as subject to the ordinary rule as to costs, & on two occasions orders were made requiring appcts. to give security for costs. After the hearing had proceeded for some time appcts. withdrew their claim in view of a prior trial of the invention found to have been made on behalf of the Govt. which, by virtue of the proviso to Patents & Designs Act, 1919, s. 8, entitled the Govt. to make use of it thereafter without payment. On the question how the costs ought to be borne :—Held : (1) under that part of Patents & Designs Act, 1919, which authorised proceedings against a Govt. department, there was no express mention of costs, & the authority to deal with them was derived from the general jurisdiction of the ct., & the ct. had, therefore, no authority to depart from the common law rule that the Crown neither paid nor received costs, unless the special circumstances of the particular case justified it in so doing ; (2) having regard to the orders that had been made before the hearing of the motion, & particularly to the two orders for security for costs, the ct. would infer an agreement between the parties that each of them should be treated as ordinary litigants as regarded liability for costs.—Re LETTERS PATENT NO. 139,207, Re CARBONIT AKT., [1924] 2 Ch. 53 ; 93 L. 317 i. Addition of Attorney-General—Action affecting rights of Crown—Petition of right not applicable.]—This was an appeal by the A.-G. for Manitoba from an order by which he was added as a deft. to an action brought against the University of Manitoba to enforce agreements under which pltfs. had agreed to donate certain land as a site for the University on the condition that the University expended a certain amount of money on the grounds & in the erection of buildings. Pltfs. had transferred to the University all of the land originally contemplated except 25 acres which, under an agreement with the provincial Govt., they transferred to the province as a site for a school for the deaf. The agreements with the University were confirmed by an order-in-council which also authorised the execution of the agreement made with the Crown. Pltfs. alleged that these agreements were interdependent, & that there was in reality a tri-partite bargain whereby the Govt. entered into the arrangement previously made by the Governors of the University, furnishing $500,000 for a school for the deaf as part of the general scheme for the erection of educational buildings. This contention the A.-G. denied. Pltfs. asked for specific performance & for an injunction restraining the University from doing anything at variance with its contract with pltfs., & from accepting any money from the Crown for the erection or maintenance of university buildings elsewhere than on said site. No relief was asked for against the Crown ; all that was sought with respect to it was a declaratory judgment that the contracts and order-in-council were not ultra vires :—Held : the appeal should be dismissed, for the reasons : (a) the A.-G. should be a party to this action to represent public interests which he alone can serve. Moreover his presence was necessary to make any declaratory judgment which might be given binding upon the Crown ; (b) petition of right is not the proper remedy in this case, for there was no direct claim made against the Crown ; (c) the case falls within the ambit of cases where the A.-G. is properly joined.—TUXEDO HOLDING CO., LTD. v. UNIVERSITY OF MANITOBA & A.-G. Deft. in an action in the K. B. Div. for arrears of rent took out a summons to set aside the writ, on the ground that he was a member of the staff of the German Embassy, & filed two affidavits in support of his application. Pltf. applied for leave to cross-examine deft. upon his affidavits. The judge ordered deft. to attend for cross-examination. On appeal the A.-G. attended at the request of the Foreign Office, & on the invitation of the ct. informed them that deft. had been appointed a member of the staff of the German Ambassador under the style of consular secretary, & had been received in that capacity by the British Govt.:—Held: (1) the statement of the A.-G. was binding on the ct., & deft. was entitled to diplomatic privilege; (2) (LORD DUNEDIN) apart from that statement, the order for the cross-examination of deft. would have been justified.—ENGELKE v. MUSMANN, [1928] A. 465a. —— By order of diplomatic superior.]—Deft., who was First Secretary of the Peruvian Legation, took out a policy of insurance against legal liability to members of the public in connection with the driving of his motor car, the policy providing that "the assured . . . shall not in any way act to the detriment or prejudice of the (insurance) co.'s interests," & that "the co. is entitled to take absolute control of all negotiations & proceedings." Pltf. brought an action for personal injuries against deft., & the latter served on the insurance co. a third-party notice claiming an indemnity. An appearance without protest was entered in the action on behalf of deft., &, as the Peruvian Minister forbade deft. to raise the plea of diplomatic immunity, no such plea was inserted in the defence. The jury found a verdict for pltf. for damages, & the insurance co. repudiated liability on the ground that deft. had broken the conditions of the policy by insisting that the plea of diplomatic immunity should not be raised:—Held: the privilege of diplomatic immunity was waived by the entry of appearance without protest.—DICKINSON v. DEL SOLAR, [1930] 1 K. On June 28, 1919, these Powers signed a treaty of peace, but they did not exchange & deposit ratifications of the treaty until Jan. 1920. sg. Calling out militia—Liability for expenses—Whether on Dominion or Province.]—The question referred to this ct. was whether the province of Nova Scotia was liable, or not, to pay to the Dominion of Canada all expenses & costs incurred by the latter by reason of part of the active militia of Canada being called out & serving in aid of the civil power in the county of Cape Breton in 1925, in a case of riot, upon a requisition, made by the A.-G. of Nova Scotia in the form prescribed by s. 85 of the Militia Act, which included an undertaking by him that these expenses & costs would be paid to the Dominion Govt. by the province:—Held: the question should be answered in the negative. Sects. 80 to 90 of the Militia Act repose certain powers in the person occupying the position of A.-G. in the province for the time being, but the exercise of these powers does not in any way depend upon the consent of the Lieutenant-Governor or of the provincial legislature. The Militia Act envisages the A.-G., not in his capacity as A.-G. to His Majesty as the Sovereign Head of the province, but as a person in whom certain powers are vested & on whom certain duties are laid by the statute. These sects. apply to every province & go into operation independently of the scope of the A.-G.'s authority to bind the province in respect of the expenditure of moneys for such purpose. Therefore these enactments do not contemplate a duty to pay, proceeding from a contract between the province & the Dominion. The revenues of the province are vested in His Majesty as the supreme head of the province, & the right of appropriation of all such revenues belongs to the legislature of the province exclusively. Semble: the A.-G., whose duties, in so far as now material, include the supervision of the administration of justice within the province, has no statutory authority to undertake the payment now demanded by the Dominion: the subject matters comprised within the supervision of the administration of justice would not embrace authority to enter into such an undertaking.—Re TROOPS IN CAPE BRETON, REFERENCE, [1930] S. The proprietors having claimed compensation for loss of profits during the three years:—Held: the loss of profits was due, not to the war, but to the requisition & the fire, & the basis upon which compensation fell to be assessed was the prices obtainable for whisky during the three years, taken in conjunction with the other circumstances actually existing during that period.—MACKENZIE BROTHERS v. THE ADMIRALTY, [1925] S. occupied extensive premises peculiarly well suited to their purposes. These premises were taken by the Govt. under powers conferred by statute for the defence of the realm. Claimants, having tried & failed to acquire premises temporarily, took the only reasonable course; they bought other premises, fitted them for use as a garage, & transferred to them all the appliances of their business which they thus continued to carry on as well as they could. When the Govt. retired from possession of the original premises claimants sold the substituted premises. They alleged that the difference between the amount they had expended in acquiring the substituted premises & fitting them for use as a garage on the one hand, & the sum they received on the sale of the substituted premises on the other hand amounted to £3,429. They claimed this sum as an item of "direct loss or damage incurred or sustained by reason of interference with" their "property or business" within sect. 2 (1) (b) of the above Act:—Held: "direct loss or damage" may include consequential damage, & the item claimed could not be entirely excluded as indirect loss, but the amount to which claimants might be entitled in respect thereof must be assessed by the War Compensation Ct.—A. & B. Power to impose payment for licence to sell ship to foreigner—Recovery of money paid—Indemnity Act, 1920 (c. 48), s. 1 (1).]—The Shipping Controller, purporting to act in pursuance of his powers under Defence of the Realm Regulations, imposed upon suppliants as a condition of granting them a licence to sell a steamship to a foreigner the payment to him by suppliants of £30,800. By their petition of right suppliants alleged that the Shipping Controller had no lawful authority to impose a condition or to exact the payment, which suppliants had paid under protest, & that the Shipping Controller thereby became liable to repay the money to suppliants as money had & received to their use. The petition of right was not brought within one year from the termination of the war or within one year from the exaction of the money. The Crown demurred to the petition, on the ground that the case if founded on the alleged tort of the Shipping Controller was barred by the above sub-sect., & if based on an alleged breach of contract, the proceedings not having been brought within the prescribed time failed under proviso (b) of that sub-sect. A further ground of demurrer was that a petition of right would not lie against the Crown for tort, for the King could do no wrong. received by the Shipping Controller & now in the hands of the Crown, & that their claim so grounded was not a proceeding for or in respect or on account of any act of the Shipping Controller, & therefore was not within the terms of the Act:—Held: the allegation that suppliants' money had been extorted from them by the wrongful act of the Shipping Controller was an essential part of suppliants' case, from which the claim for money had & received arose; & as such act was one to which the above sub-sect. applied, the petition of right was barred by that sub-sect.—BRISTOL CHANNEL STEAMERS, LTD. v. R. 526b. —— —— ——.]—The Shipping Controller, purporting to act under the authority of Defence of the Realm Regulations, required as a condition of a licence to suppliants to sell one of their ships to a foreign firm that they should pay a percentage of the purchase money to the Ministry of Shipping, & suppliants paid the percentage. On a petition of right to recover back the money so paid:—Held: (1) the imposition of the condition was illegal, & the payment was not a voluntary payment; (2) the petition of right was barred by the above sub-sect.; it was not open to suppliants, by waiving the tort of the illegal exaction & suing for money had & received, to bring the case within par. (b) of the proviso to the sub-sect., for the case fell within the exception to the proviso as being one in which a claim for compensation could have been brought under sect. 2 (1) (b); (3) (BANKES & SARGANT, L.JJ.) suppliants failed to bring the case within the proviso upon the further ground that the contracts referred to in paragraph (b) are limited to express contracts, & do not include the fictitious contract to repay money improperly extorted, the implication of which arises upon a waiver of the tort.—BROCKLEBANK, LTD. v. R., [1925] 1 K. On a petition of right to recover back the amount from the Crown on the ground that the demand was unlawful:—Held: as the demand was made in the bonâ fide belief that the Shipping Controller was entitled to make it & as he was purporting to act in the execution of his duty the Crown was protected by the above sub-sect.—MARSHAL SHIPPING CO. (IN LIQUIDATION) v. R. (1925), 41 T. L. R. 285.

526d. —— —— —— Transfer of liabilities incurred by Shipping Controller to Board of Trade—Whether action maintainable against Board of Trade.]—(1) Pltfs. in 1922 brought an action against the Board of Trade for money had & received. The money which it was sought to recover was alleged to have been wrongfully extorted from pltfs. in 1919 by the Shipping Controller under colour of his office, & it was alleged that, on pltfs. electing to waive the tort, he would have been personally liable to refund the money as having been received to their use. By Ministry of Shipping (Cessation) Order, 1921, it was provided that the office of Shipping Controller should cease to exist, & that "All . . . liabilities . . . incurred by the Shipping Controller . . . shall be transferred to the Board of Trade." The "Board of Trade" is the name given by statute to an unincorporated committee of the Privy Council. On an application to strike out the writ on the ground that the Board of Trade, as a department of the Crown, could not be sued:—Held: the intention of the Order was to transfer to the Board of Trade as a Govt. department the personal liabilities, if any such there were, of the Shipping Controller for any wrongful acts committed by him in his office, & the Board was liable to be sued in respect of those acts notwithstanding that it was an unincorporated body.

(2) Although the Board of Trade may in the above-mentioned circumstances be sued as a Govt. department, service of the writ must, unless the solr. to the Board accepts service on their behalf, be effected upon the individual constituent members of the Board personally.

(3) Where an official of a Govt. department wrongfully extorts a sum of money from a subject for the use of the Crown & the injured party waives the tort:—Qu.: whether he can sue the official personally as for money had & received, or whether his only remedy is not by petition of right against the Crown.—MARSHAL SHIPPING CO. v. BOARD OF TRADE, [1923] 2 K. 534a. —— —— —— ——.]—A British ship lying in a neutral port & laden with a cargo of timber belonging to neutrals of another country was requisitioned during the war by the British Govt. & brought home with her cargo to England without the consent & against the protest of the cargo owners. The timber was then requisitioned by the Controller of Timber Supplies on behalf of the Board of Trade avowedly under Defence of the Realm Regulations, 2B & 2JJ. The owners of the cargo made a claim in the War Compensation Ct. for compensation & contended that it should be assessed under Indemnity Act, 1920 (c. 48), s. 2 (2) (iii.) (a), on the ground that in the circumstances they would but for the Act have had a legal right to compensation:—Held: (1) the regulations did not apply to a seizure of goods of a neutral brought into England against his will; (2) the requisition of the timber was justifiable as an exercise of the royal prerogative right of angary & was, therefore, made "in exercise of" a "prerogative right to His Majesty" within s. 2 (1) (b) of the Act, & inasmuch as that right involved the obligation to pay full compensation to the owner of the property seized, claimants "would have had apart from" the Act a valid claim for compensation by petition of right, &, the Crown admitting that such a claim constituted "a legal right to compensation," compensation was to be assessed according to the principle laid down in s. 2 (2) (iii.) —— —— Legal effect expressly excluded.]—By successive arrangements made before 1913 between an American firm & an English co. the American firm were constituted sole agents for the sale in the United States & Canada of tissues for carbonising paper supplied by the English co. The greater part of these tissues was manufactured for this English co. by another English co. By an arrangement made between the American firm & both English cos. in 1913 the English cos. expressed their willingness that the existing arrangements with the American firm, which were then for one year only, should be continued on the same lines for three years & so on for further periods of three years, subject to six months' notice. This document, after setting out the understanding between the parties, including several modifications of the previous arrangements, proceeded as follows : " This arrangement is not entered into, nor is this memorandum written, as a formal or legal agreement, & shall not be subject to legal jurisdiction in the law cts. either of the United States or England, but it is only a definite expression & record of the purpose & intention of the three parties concerned, to which they each honourably pledge themselves, with the fullest confidence—based on past business with each other—that it will be carried through by each of the three parties with mutual loyalty & friendly co-operation. This is hereinafter referred to as the ' honourable pledge ' clause." Disputes having arisen between the parties, the English cos. determined this arrangement without notice. He accordingly claimed to be indemnified for this loss, which he estimated at £6,000, or, alternatively, to be recompensed in so far as the estate had benefited from his services. The ct. dismissed the action as irrelevant, holding that pursuer's averments did not import a legal claim enforceable against the deceased's executry, in respect (a) that nothing more was disclosed than a mere expression of intention on the part of the deceased to make the pursuer his heir; (b) that, even on the assumption that a definite promise of heirship was averred, such a promise could have been proved only by the writ of the deceased, & here admittedly no writ existed; (c) that no primâ facie case for indemnification on ground of equity was disclosed, the loss averred by the pursuer as a result of the deceased's representations being based solely on hypothetical calculations & not on actual outlay.—GRAY v. JOHNSTON, [1928] S. sz. Delivery of goods—Before time laid down in order.]—Applt. sent an order on June 7 to resp. to send him on hire a binder, to be delivered on or about Oct. 1. The order contained a term that it was not to be binding on resp. until received & ratified in writing or by actual delivery of the goods to applt., & that the order might be cancelled by applt. giving notice to resp by registered letter at least thirty days prior to date for delivery, with a proviso that if prior to that date or six months thereafter applt. ordered a binder from any other person, resp. might by registered notice revive the order, & deliver the binder within thirty days. An agent of resp. was told by applt. that he wished to cancel the order, as he was buying a harvester, & the agent notified resp., but no notice was given by applt. to resp. On Sept. 2, resp. forwarded by rail a binder to applt., & wrote him stating that the binder had been forwarded per rail. The machine arrived, & applt. refused to take delivery, but admitted he had received the letter :—Held : the letter did not amount to a ratification of the order, & a delivery on Sept. 2 did not necessarily imply a delivery pursuant or referable to the stipulation in the contract for delivery on or about Oct. 1, & there was no acceptance of the order.—BLACKETT v. CLUTTERBUCK BROTHERS (ADELAIDE), LTD., [1923] S. your client in due course." This was done, but deft. then refused to execute the lease, & on Jan. 24, 1931, granted a lease of the premises to some one else. On Feb. 3, 1931, pltf. commenced proceedings for specific performance, or, alternatively, damages:—Held: there was no binding contract to grant a lease, as the expression "subject to the terms of a lease" in the letter of Dec. 9, 1930, meant "subject to the terms to be contained in a lease executed by the lessor." It followed that even if deft.'s solrs. were the agents of deft. to communicate by their letter of Dec. 29, 1930, the fact that deft. had himself agreed to the terms of the lease, so that this letter was a sufficient memorandum of the agreement signed by deft.'s duly authorised agents within Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 40, there was no binding contract, because the result of the letter of Dec. 9, 1930, was that there could be no concluded agreement until the lease had been executed.—RAINGOLD v. BROMLEY, [1931] 2 Ch. 307; 100 L. It is reasonable, they thought, to imply good faith as a necessary ingredient. On the other hand, it seems to be putting an undue strain on the words to construe them, when used by a layman, as connoting not the approval of his own solr., which is their plain, ordinary meaning, but the decision of a ct. of justice after an unknown delay & at an unascertainable cost (MAUGHAM, J.).—CURTIS MOFFAT, LTD. v. WHEELER, [1929] 2 Ch. 224; 98 L. 511a. —— ——.]—During Mar. 1928, there were negotiations & detailed correspondence between resp. co. & another co. who were proposing to purchase the business of the resp. co., culminating in a letter dated Mar. 21, 1928, in which the prospective purchasers indicated that the terms contained in the correspondence, & as arranged at interviews between the parties, were generally accepted "subject to such terms being fully set out in a formal contract or agreement, to be submitted to us & finally approved of." On Mar. 29, 1928, two of the directors of resp. co. resigned & entered the service of the purchasers. On Mar. 30 resps. gave notice to their foreign agents terminating their engagements. The formal contract was dated Apr. 16, 1928 :—Held : the correspondence did not constitute a contract.—TODD (H.M. INSPECTOR OF TAXES) v. JONES BROS., LTD. (1930), 15 Tax Cas. 396.

664a. General rule.]—An agreement of May 6, 1929, between B. & L., who were betrothed, provided that L. should deposit at a bank, in her own name & B.'s, the sum of £4,000, to be re-deposited upon the marriage in a current account in their joint names, & to be used in paying off a mtge. on B.'s premises & in buying him a practice. The amount of the mtge. was stated to be about £1,200. The agreement had been drawn up on the instructions of L.'s brother, who had provided the £400 as her dowry. Despite the terms of the agreement, sums were withdrawn before the marriage, which took place on June 16. On May 15 B. & L. withdrew £1,000, with which the practice was bought, & on June 5 they withdrew £2,350. They also withdrew other sums at later dates. B. had the money, & L. signed documents authorising the withdrawals. The marriage was unhappy, & the parties separated on Sept. 27. There was then only the sum of £150 in the joint account, B. having had £3,850. At the date of the agreement he owed £2,000 to his bank secured by charge on his premises, a fact which he had not told L.'s brother. In an action by L. & her brother to recover the money from B., & asking that the agreement of May 6, 1929, should be set aside or rectified, on the ground that L. was induced by B.'s undue influence to sign the documents authorising the withdrawals :—Held : the agreement must stand, but the doctrine of Huguenin v. Baseley, No. 611, applies to the relation between persons engaged to be married ; it had not been established that the sum of £2,000, part of the £2,350, withdrawn from the joint account, was a proper gift to deft. ; & pltfs. were entitled to judgment for £1,000, half of the £2,000.—Re Lloyds Bank, Ltd., Bomze & Lederman v. Bomze, [1931] 1 Ch. 289 ; 100 L. In an action for damages deft. pleaded that the contract related to an interest in land & that by Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 40 (1), it could not be enforced against him as there was no written evidence of it. Pltfs. contended in answer that there had been part performance by them in looking after the premises and keeping the staff together until the defendant should take possession :—Held : that part of the contract which related to the goodwill, etc., was not severable from the part which dealt with taking over the premises, & that there was no part performance sufficient to take the case out of the statute, & the action failed.—HAWKESWORTH v. TURNER (1930), 46 T. 845a. —— Parol warranty to let for certain purposes.]—Pltf., in an action for damages for breach of warranty in connection with the letting to him of certain premises, alleged that as a basis of negotiations which culminated in an agreement in writing whereby defts. agreed to let & pltf. agreed to take the premises in question, defts. verbally warranted to let the premises for dancing purposes. Defts had no power to let the premises for such purposes without the consent of the superior landlord, & such consent was never in fact obtained. Pltf. took possession under the agreement & expended considerable sums in alterations, & now claimed to recover the amount of such expenses less the sums received by him during his possession of the premises. There was no fraudulent misrepresentation:—Held: pltf. had failed to establish the alleged parol agreement, & even if the evidence had established that before the contract was entered into pltf. had asked whether the premises could be let for dancing & had been answered in the affirmative, it would only have been evidence as to the subject-matter of the contract & could not control, vary, or add to the terms of the written contract.—CRAWFORD v. WHITE CITY RINK (NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE), LTD. 859a. —— What amounts to—Reconstitution of action.]—Defts. on Jan. 9, 1924, agreed to sell a quantity of wood to a partnership firm. The firm, being in financial difficulties, formed a limited co., & duly notified defts. On July 9 it was orally agreed that the new co. should give defts. a cheque & three bills in respect of the indebtedness of the old firm, & that defts. should supply to the new co. the goods sold under the contract of Jan. 9, & accept the new co. as buyers of the goods. The new co. subsequently gave to defts. the cheque & three bills, but defts. did not deliver the goods under the contract of Jan. 9 to the new co. The two partners in the old firm then brought an action against defts. for breach of the contract of Jan. 9. To that action defts. put in a defence signed by counsel in which they pleaded, in par. 3, that it had been agreed by the contract of July 9 that the new co. should give defts. on the following Monday a cheque & three drafts, & that defts. would supply to the new co. instead of to the old firm the goods sold under the contract of Jan. 9, & accept that co. as buyers of the goods. The pleadings were then amended & the action was reconstituted, the partners in the old firm being struck out & the new co. substituted as pltfs., & the cause of action was stated to be a breach of the agreement of July 9. Defts. then amended their defence & relied upon Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 4, as a defence to that amended action:—Held: (1) par. 3 of the original unamended defence which was signed by counsel constituted a sufficient note or memorandum in writing of the contract signed by an agent of the party to be charged to satisfy the above sect., inasmuch as (2) the new departure with regard to the parties & the cause of action when the action was reconstituted must be treated as the commencement of the action within the rule in Lucas v. Dixon, No. 859, ante.—FARR, SMITH & CO. v. MESSERS, LTD., [1928] 1 K. In every single case under Stat. 1459a. ——.]—S., a customer of bkpt., a stockbroker, became indebted to him in respect of Stock Exchange transactions in a sum for which bkpt., on Dec. 18, 1923, recovered judgment. Later, S. became similarly indebted to bkpt. in a further sum. On Jan. 15, 1924, bkpt. assigned both debts to W. to secure £500, & covenanted with him that, in the event of his refraining from giving notice of the assignment to S., he, bkpt., would, on payment of the debts or any part thereof, hand the cheque or other form of payment to W. In Mar. 1924, J., who acted as solr. for both bkpt. & W. in the matter of the assignment, on the instructions of both & without disclosing same, made an agreement with S. for the liquidation of the two debts, whereby S. undertook to pay the aggregate amount thereof by monthly instalments, the first instalments being allocated to the payment of the later of the two debts & the subsequent ones to the payment of the judgment debt ; & S. further agreed to deliver promissory notes payable to bkpt. or order to cover the instalments allocated to the later debt. J. received the notes from S. &, as agent of W., collected the amounts as they fell due on the notes & paid part thereof to W. & retained the balance. The secretary of a charity fraudulently represented to P. that he or the charity was in a position to undertake that P. would receive a knighthood if P. made a large donation to the funds of the charity, & undertook that the title would be conferred if the donation was made. P., relying upon those representations & in the belief that the secretary was authorised by the charity to give the undertaking, made a large donation to the funds of the charity. As P. did not receive the knighthood he brought an action against the charity & its secretary to recover back the money he had paid as money had & received or as damages for deceit or breach of contract :—Held : a contract for the purchase of a title, however the money is to be expended, is an improper & illegal contract, as being against public policy, & as P. knew that he was entering into an improper & illegal contract he could not recover back the money he had paid from the charity as money had & received, nor recover damages from the charity or its secretary, nor claim to repudiate the contract as being still executory & recover back the money paid.—PARKINSON v. COLLEGE OF AMBULANCE, LTD. & HARRISON, [1925] 2 K. 2359a. —— Marine insurance—Breach of Marine Insurance Act, 1906 (c. 41), s. 84, & Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39).]—In 1920 the E. co. & the Y. co. entered into a participation agreement effective as from Jan. 1, 1920, which was a reinsurance treaty binding the E. co. to cede & the Y. co. to accept a participation of all risks therein mentioned of the share retained by the E. co. accepted after Jan. 1, 1920. In Sept. 1921, the E. co. arranged that the N. co. should take over the Y. co.'s position as from Jan. 1, 1920; & in Jan. 1922, an agreement, hereinafter called "the Outwards Treaty," on the same lines & with the same provisions as those of the agreement with the Y. co. was entered into between the E. co. & the N. co. In 1921 the N. co. & the E. co. entered into another participation agreement, hereinafter called "the Inwards Treaty," the N. co. ceding & the E. co. accepting a share of all marine risks. The Inwards Treaty had no provisions for the issuing of policies, or for particulars sufficient to make possible the issuing of policies, to satisfy the provisions of Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), & Marine Insurance Act, 1906 (c. 41). No stamped policies were in fact issued under any of the three agreements, & no premiums were ever actually paid to the N. co., which was credited with the proper proportion of the net premiums received by the E. co. On the compulsory winding-up of the N. co. the E. co. claimed to be entitled to prove for sums paid by it for premiums under the Outwards Treaty, after allowing for sums paid or credited to it by the N. co. under the Inwards Treaty. The Official Receiver rejected the claim on the ground that both treaties were invalid & inadmissible in evidence, because they were contracts of marine insurance which did not comply with the requirements of Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), & Marine Insurance Act, 1906 (c. 41), & were unlawful; & upon a summons asking for an order that the proof should be allowed:—Held: money paid by the E. co. upon the N. co.'s taking over the reinsurance treaty with the Y. co. could not be recovered on the ground of total failure of consideration, as both parties knew that a continuous breach of the law was contemplated, & as the treaty, assuming it to be illegal, had been partially carried into effect.—Re NATIONAL BENEFIT ASSURANCE CO., LTD., [1931] 1 Ch. 46; 100 L. 2861a. —— For fixed period—Afterwards determinable on notice—Time for giving notice.]—By an agreement dated July 12, 1927, pltfs. & defts. agreed that pltfs. were to deal with defts.' entire output of Jarrow pig iron available for delivery in Scotland, pltfs. undertaking to push the sale of the same in Scotland in preference to any other brand. They were to base their prices on the current prices for Middlesbrough pig iron, free on truck makers' works or f.o.b. makers' wharf, excluding Tees dues, & to pay cash on Mondays for the previous week's shipments. The agreement also contained the following clause: "It is understood that the above agreement is to hold good for the period of twelve months from Apr. 22, 1927, with six months' notice thereafter on either side to terminate, & that should any misunderstanding arise in connection with this agreement, an arbitrator should be appointed by the president for the time being of the London Chamber of Commerce." Disputes having arisen between the parties about the prices which pltfs. ought to charge for the pig iron which they sold, defts. notified pltfs. that they terminated the agreement as from Apr. 22, 1928. Pltfs. acknowledged the notice & accepted it as a notice terminating the agreement at a date six months after Apr. 22, 1928, but defts. insisted that the agreement was terminated on Apr. 22, 1928. Pltfs. brought an action for breaches of contract, (a) in terminating the contract before the expiry of the agreed term, & (b) because, as they alleged, defts. refused to supply them at "the current prices for the Middlesbrough pig iron":—Held: defts. were not entitled to terminate it on Apr. 22, 1928. It could only be terminated by a six months' notice, which could not be given before twelve months had elapsed, but could be given at any time after the expiration of the twelve months.—JACKS (WILLIAM) & CO. v. PALMER'S SHIPBUILDING & IRON CO. 2877a. ——.]—Deft. was the chairman of the S. Co. which at the end of 1921 was seeking to issue £15,000. First Lien Debentures to rank pari passu with a previous issue of first lien debentures of the same amount; & deft. having interested pltf. in the matter, sent him a letter of indemnity dated Feb. 17, 1922, in these terms: "Regarding the issue of £15,000 First Lein Debentures of the S. Co. at the price of £80 per £100 . . . I understand you are subscribing for £3,000 of the same at a cost to you of £2,400. In consideration of your giving me one-fourth of any profit you may receive on such investment, I hereby indemnify you against any loss thereon. The expression 'any profit' only refers to the redemption price of £100 per £80 which, when received, will show a profit of £20 per bond & the bonus out of the proceeds of any royalties on oil sales from the co.'s properties during the currency of the debentures. . . . The interest you will be entitled to receive from the co. is excluded from the consideration of profits." The debentures were redeemable on July 1, 1925, but they were secured by two debenture trust deeds which gave power to extend the due date, & in Apr. 1925, steps were taken which resulted in its extension to July 1, 1930. In May & June, 1925, a correspondence took place between pltf. & deft. in which pltf. announced his intention of selling the debentures, & deft. protested against this, claiming that they must be kept till their due date. On July 10, 1925, pltf. put the debentures up for sale, & in the absence of other bidders sold them to his son for £25. He then commenced proceedings to recover the amount of his loss, but the House of Lords decided that nothing was payable under the indemnity until the due date arrived. On July 18, 1928, the co. went into liquidation & pltf. having repurchased the debentures from his son, brought these proceedings to recover his loss:—Held: in selling the debentures pltf. had committed a breach of an implied term of the contract & having failed to maintain the position essential to enable deft. to receive the consideration for the indemnity, he had committed a breach of a term going to the root of the contract. Deft. had elected by his pleadings in the previous action to treat the contract as at an end & pltf. could not therefore maintain the present action.—GUY-PELL v. FOSTER, [1930] 2 Ch. 169; 99 L. J. —— Absolute contract.]—By a contract dated Aug. 16, 1922, the sellers sold to the purchasers about one thousand boxes of Smyrna sultanas at 60s. a cwt. c.i.f. London, to be shipped from Smyrna by steamer to London during Sept. 1922. Smyrna at the date of the contract was in the occupation of the Greeks. On Sept. 9, 1922, it was taken by Turkish forces & shipment became impossible, with the result that the sellers did not ship any of the goods. The buyers claimed damages, & the dispute went before arbitrators, who stated a case for the opinion of the ct. under Arbn. Act, 1889 (c. 49), s. 7. The sellers said that they were excused from performance on the grounds (1) that the contract became illegal when the port of shipment came under Turkish control, as a state of war at that time existed between England & Turkey ; & (2) that a state of circumstances had arisen which made the contract impossible of performance & that differed totally from the conditions with reference to which the contract was made :—Held : mere impossibility of performance did not discharge a party where performance was not naturally impossible, unless such a state of affairs had arisen as displaced the fundamental basis of the contract ; in the absence of any strike, war or force majeure clause, the buyers were entitled to damages for failure of the sellers to deliver.—SARGANT (W. 3099a. —— ——.]—The lessees of a hotel entered into two contracts with a firm of advertising agents, under the terms of which the latter were entitled to erect & exhibit, for a term of years, upon the roof of the hotel, electrically illuminated advertisements. An electric sign was duly erected. Before the expiration of the term the local authority, in exercise of its statutory powers, served the lessees with a notice to treat for the purchase of their estate & interest in the hotel, &, ultimately, having acquired the reversion to the lessees' term, took possession, closed the hotel, & began to demolish it. The electric sign was removed by arrangement with the advertising agents, who subsequently commenced an action against the lessees to recover damages for breach of the two contracts:—Held: the local authority had acquired defts.' interest in the premises by compulsion; the two contracts did not confer upon pltfs. any proprietary interest or estate in the hotel; &, as it could not be said that both parties to those contracts had made their bargain upon the footing that if the local authority exercised their powers & took the hotel the contracts were to be discharged, there must be a declaration that defts. were liable to pltfs. for damages for breach of those contracts.—WALTON HARVEY, LTD. v. WALKER & HOMFRAYS, LTD., [1931] 1 Ch. 274; 144 L. The shipment of the sugar had been prevented by the requisitioning of ships by the British Govt.:—Held: Civil Law Ordinance No. III (Str. Sett. No. VIII. of 1909), s. 5 (1), which provides that in all questions which arise for decision in the Colony "with respect to mercantile law generally, the law to be administered shall be the same as would be administered in England in the like case, at the corresponding period, unless in any case other provision is, or shall be made, by statute," made Defence of the Realm Amendment Act No. 2, 1915 (c. 37), & Courts (Emergency Powers) Act, 1917 (c. 26), applicable to the case, & the latter Act gave a good defence to the counterclaim whether the requisitioning was under Defence of the Realm Act, 1914 (c. 29), or under the prerogative power.—SENG DJIT HIN v. NAGURDAS PURSHOTUMDAS & Co., [1923] A. 3096 v. ——.]—Where a contract to thresh a whole crop does not provide for the rights & liabilities of the parties in the event of the threshing being interrupted by weather conditions, it will be held that the contract was based on the assumption that the state of the weather would remain such as to permit the threshing being done with nothing more than temporary interruption, &, therefore, although the contract will not be determined by a slight storm, a permanent break in the weather making threshing impossible for an indefinite period will put an end to it; & when so ended the thresher is entitled to recover for the threshing which he has already done.—KLEIN v. SANDERSON, [1926] 3 D. The ship was requisitioned by the Govt. before Mar. 1, 1917, & was not released until Feb. 1919. 3183a. —— —— Ship ordered to leave port—Subsequent permission to return & load.]—A charterparty of an Italian ship provided that 216 running hours, Sundays & holidays excepted, weather permitting, should be allowed the charterers for loading & discharging, & that the lay days should commence from the time the steamer was ready to receive or discharge her cargo, the captain giving six hours' notice to the charterers' agents, berth or no berth. The exceptions clause excepted "restraint of princes, rulers & people." The ship arrived at Batoum, & notice of readiness to load was given, & the lay days began to run. Owing, however, to a dispute between the Russian & Italian Govts. the ship was ordered by the port authorities to leave Batoum & also Russian waters, & accordingly the ship went to Constantinople. Subsequently permission was obtained to load the ship at Batoum, & she returned after being absent from the port a little over a fortnight. The owners subsequently claimed demurrage from the charterers, on the basis that the lay days continued to run during the period the ship was absent from Batoum :—Held : interference by the Russian Govt. did not amount to such an illegality as to excuse the performance of the contract.—CANTIERE NAVALE TRIESTINA v. HANDELSVERTRETUNG DER RUSS. Originally all defts. were jointly & severally liable in respect of the judgment debts. After the agreement was made, the co. sought to examine deft. Pltf. accordingly received a cheque for £1,000 from defts. & after receiving it she executed the second bill of sale, which stated that the consideration for it was £1,000 paid to pltf. In an action by pltf. to restrain defts. from disposing of the furniture comprised in the second bill of sale, pltf. relied on Bills of Sale (1878) Amendment Act, 1882 (c. 43), s. 8, & she contended that the real consideration was the payment off of the moneylender & the release of her furniture from the first bill of sale:—Held: the consideration for the second bill of sale was the loan of £1,000, & as a cheque was a good payment until dishonoured there was no need to state in the second bill of sale that the payment was by cheque, & therefore, as the consideration was correctly stated in the second bill of sale, the action failed.—D'USEZ v. TRAFFICS & DISCOVERIES, LTD. Double payment by bank to client's order.] —Pltfs., a London bank, on telegraphic instructions from a bank in Warsaw, which was acting for a Polish co., paid to defts. £2,000 on account of a sum of ov r £4,000 owed by the Polish co. to defts. The Warsaw bank then wrote a letter of confirmation, but pltfs. mistook the letter for a direction to pay defts. a further sum of £2,000 & did so. Afterwards the Polish co., believing the sum paid off to be £2,000, told the Warsaw bank to arrange for the payment of another £1,000, but the instructions accordingly sent by the Warsaw bank to pltfs. were lost in transmission & were never received. On discovering the facts pltfs. were willing to credit defts. with the above-mentioned £1,000 & brought an action to recover £1,000, the balance of the £2,000, as money paid under a mistake of fact :—Held : (1) there was no such mistake of fact as entitled pltfs. to maintain that the amount claimed was money paid to their 4358a. Payment of rates on tithe rentcharge by occupier—Demand after Tithe Act, 1891 (c. 8).] —At the date of the passing of the above Act rates upon a tithe rentcharge were due & in arrears, owing to the omission of the overseers to demand payment thereof from the occupiers of the land out of which the tithe rentcharge issued. The tithe rentcharge for the period in respect of which the rates in arrear were due had been paid to the tithe-owner in full. After the passing of the Act, the overseers, purporting to act under Tithe Act of 1837 (c. 69), s. 8, demanded payment of the arrears of rates from the occupiers of the land, who paid them, & were allowed the amount thereof by their landlord, the owner of the land, out of the half-year's rent next becoming due. Subsequently thereto a half-year's tithe rentcharge became payable by the landowner. The landowner claimed to deduct therefrom the amount which he had allowed to the occupiers out of their rent in respect of the arrears of rates paid by them:—Held: having regard to the Act of 1891, s. 6, the payment of the arrears of rates by the occupiers was a voluntary payment, & they were not entitled to deduct the amount so paid from their rent; consequently the landowner was not entitled to deduct the amount which he had allowed to the occupiers from the tithe rentcharge due by him.—Re TITHE ACT, 1891, ROBERTS v. POTTS, JONES v. COOKE, [1894] 1 Q. 4907. Add. Annotation:—Refd. Public Trustee v. Elder, [1926] Ch. 776.

4908a. ——.]—The element of personal confidence which renders a contract unassignable is not confined to cases where the purchaser relies on the personal skill of the vendor or manufacturer, or where the manufacturer relies on the personal idiosyncrasies of the buyer with regard to his requirements or with regard to his performance to the covenants other than his obligation to pay. Where the ability of the buyer to pay is the subject-matter of personal confidence, the contract is just as much taken out of assignability as where the manufacturing skill of the seller is the subject-matter of the buyer's personal confidence.

Defts. entered into a contract with H. to supply him with 10,000 tons of coal, the delivery of which was to be extended over two years. H. had been carrying on the business of a coal merchant for some years, the business consisting of carting coals from defts.' depots round the streets of a certain district & there selling it to the working classes by weight in relatively small quantities, it being a regular practice to give short credit. H. assigned the contract to pltf., who up to the time of the assignment had no experience of the coal trade:—Held: there was that degree of difference between H.'s & pltf.'s knowledge of the business, which, having regard to the nature of the business, constituted an element of personal confidence in the matter personal to H. which made the contract unassignable.—COOPER v. MICKLEFIELD COAL & LIME CO., LTD., COOPER v. RAYNER (1912), 107 L. 4922a. Agreement as to right to perform play.]—By an agreement pltf. grant to E. "the sole & exclusive right of representing or performing" in certain areas a play, of the music of which pltf. was the composer:—Held: the agreement was not limited to performance at a theatre & was not a mere licence, but was an assignment to E. of rights which either he or his exors. could assign.—MESSAGER v. BRITISH BROADCASTING CO., LTD., [1929] A. 4929a. Contract by jockey to ride horses.]—A contract by a jockey to ride the horses of an owner is dissolved by the death of either party.

That it was a personal contract . . . is clear beyond words. A jockey is chosen because of the confidence reposed in his personal skill & judgment & his ability in racing (WRIGHT, J.).—GRAVES v. COHEN (1929), 46 T. L. R. 121.

In 1919 S. assigned his rights under the agreement to pltf. The assignment was known to deft., who raised no objection. Deft. in 1922 put gates across the tramway, removed part of the tramline, & destroyed part of a trestle bridge:—Held: the grant or contract was not a personal one, & pltf. had an equitable interest by assignment from S. in the easement.—MACDONALD v. PEDDLE, [1923] N. 5041a. ——.]—Defts., manufacturers, sold goods to pltfs., retailers, upon condition that pltfs. should not resell the goods to the public at less than a specified price. After business had been carried on upon this condition for three years defts., without giving pltfs. notice of their intention to change their method of business, began to sell goods direct to the public without the intervention of middlemen, at a price very much lower than that which pltfs. were obliged to charge under their contract with defts., & as a result pltfs. were left with goods which they had bought from defts. & had in stock, & could not dispose of the goods except at a loss. They claimed damages on the ground that a term must be implied in the contract that defts. would not themselves sell the goods to the public at a price below that which pltfs. were bound by the contract to charge, or at least that before beginning to sell goods to the public they would give pltfs. sufficient notice to enable them to dispose of their stock of goods at a profit :—Held : no such term as pltfs. required could be implied in the contract.—LIVOCK v. PEARSON BROTHERS (1928), 33 Com. 5066a. Term customary during war.]—The ct. found that since the outbreak of war in 1914 it had been a universal custom in the dried fruit trade to insert in all contracts for the sale of sultanas a clause as follows: "Should shipment be prevented by force majeure such as prohibition of export, blockade, war, or any consequence of warlike operations, this contract or the then unfulfilled part thereof to be cancelled without claim." The ct., therefore, rectified certain bought & sold notes by the addition of this clause on the ground that the parties must be taken to have contracted on this basis.—CARAMAN ROWLEY & MAY v. APERGHIS (1923), 40 T. 5122a. Actor.]—Applts., theatrical producers, agreed to engage resp., an American actor, to play one of the three leading comedy parts in a musical play about to be produced at the London Hippodrome for six weeks certain at a salary of £55 per week, & the contract contained a provision prohibiting resp. during the continuance of his engagement from acting elsewhere without the consent of the applts. Resp. objected that the part assigned to him was not one of the three leading comedy parts &, on the refusal of applts. to recast him, declined to appear in the play & sued applts. for damages for breach of contract. At the trial of the action before a judge & jury the jury found for resp. for £1,000 damages for loss of publicity & for three weeks' salary, & judgment was entered accordingly. The Ct. of Appeal affirmed the verdict & judgment except as to the salary :—Held : (1) upon the construction of the contract, it bound applts. to give resp. an opportunity of appearing in public in a part answering the stipulated description ; (2) it was competent to the jury, having regard to the character of the contract, to give damages to resp. for loss of publicity.—HERBERT CLAYTON & JACK WALLER, LTD. v. OLIVER, [1930] A. 5168b. Contract to print bank-notes—Implied duty not to use plates for unauthorised purpose.]—Pltfs., a Portuguese bank, made with defts., who were printers, a contract which provided that defts. should print the authorised notes for the bank, the plates being left in defts.' possession & being intended to be available only for the purposes of the bank. By means of an elaborate fraud defts. were induced by an unauthorised person to print from the plates a large quantity of notes & to deliver the notes to him, & the result was that these notes were put into circulation. In consequence of the fraud pltfs. honoured a large number of the spurious notes, & on learning the facts they found it necessary to withdraw all the genuine notes of the same issue from circulation as they had, at that time, no means of distinguishing the genuine from the spurious notes. In an action for breach of contract, negligence, or conversion :—Held : it was an implied term of the contract that there was to be no use of the plates for any purpose not authorised by pltfs., & there was an absolute duty on defts.

For some time after the lease, pltf. used the electricity to light the stall for business purposes. The lease was silent as to the supply of electricity. Deft. later cut off the supply. He then brought an action for damages, & in his claim alleged a promise by deft. not to interfere with the supply of electricity nor to prevent the continuance of such supply :—Held : there was an implied promise by deft. in the terms sued upon by pltf.—JENKINS v. LEVINSON (1929), 29 S. Held: (2) even if an action of detinue would lie, yet, upon the true construction of Limitation Act, 1623, s. 3, the words "goods & chattels" were mentioned only in reference to actions of replevin, & that as the action was an action of detinue & the cause of action, namely, the assertion by deft. of an adverse title by advertising the rolls for sale, arose more than six years before the commencement of the action, the action was barred by the statute.—BEAUMONT v. JEFFERY, [1925] Ch. 1; 93 L. There was no special custom of descent in the manor of B. affecting these copyholds:—Held: the use of the expression "heir-at-law" did not exclude the operation of the rule in Shelley's Case, which accordingly applied, & G. was entitled in customary fee simple for an estate to him & his heirs according to the custom of the manor.—Re HACK, BEADMAN v. BEADMAN, [1925] Ch. 633; 94 L. SECT. 3a.—UNDER LAW OF PROPERTY ACTS.

2032a. Estate tail in undivided share—Interest in personalty.]—Where before 1926 an undivided share in copyhold land was the subject of an estate tail, the enfranchisement of such copyhold land after 1925 can result in turning the estate tail into an absolute interest; & where, by reason of the statutory trusts under Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), such land becomes personalty, the absolute interest into which the estate tail is turned is an interest in personalty.—Re PRICE, [1928] Ch. 579; 97 L. 2032b. Equitable joint tenancy in copyholds—Subject to rentcharge—Vesting of legal estate.]—On July 5, 1802, Bryan Abbs & another trustee who predeceased him were admitted to certain copyhold plots A., B. & C. upon trust out of the rents & profits to raise & pay an annual rent of £7 10*s.* to Harrison & his heirs & subject thereto in trust for Wilson & his heirs. Many years after Bryan Abbs' death his customary heir H. C. Abbs, since deceased, was admitted to A. & C., but no one was admitted to B.; so that on Dec. 31, 1925, the best right to admittance was in the customary heirs of H. C. Abbs & Bryan Abbs. On the same date the equitable title to the land stood vested in Thompson & Collins as joint tenants in fee, subject to the equitable rentcharge then vested in Aylmer, subject to proof of his title.

On Jan. 1, 1926, the Law of Property Acts came into operation & the copyhold plots were enfranchised. The ct. being asked to determine in whom the legal estates in the land & the rentcharge vested :—Held : (1) under the 1922 Act, Sched. XII., para. 8 (b), the freehold estate in the land vested in the first instance in the personal representative of H. C. Abbs & the customary heir of Bryan Abbs as trustees, Bryan Abbs having no known personal representative; (2) either under the 1922 Act, Sched. XII., para. 8 (d), or under the 1925 Act, Sched. I., Part II., paras. 4, 6 (d), the rentcharge vested as a legal rentcharge in Aylmer or other the persons entitled thereto; (3) on the rentcharge becoming a legal rentcharge the trustees became bare trustees with no longer any active duties to perform; (4) under the 1925 Act, Sched. I., Part II., paras. 3, 6 (d), the initial vesting in the trustees was divested, & the legal estate subject to the legal rentcharge vested in Thompson & Collins as joint tenants in fee simple; (5) sect. 36 of the 1925 Act did not come into operation until after the vesting provisions had done their work. It then merely attached a trust for sale to the joint legal estate in Thompson & Collins. It did not previously attach a trust for sale to the initial estate in the trustees so as to put the divesting provisions of the 1925 Act, Sched. I., Part II., out of operation. Still less did it bring in the undivided share provisions of the 1925 Act, Sched. I., Part IV. —Re KING'S THEATRE, SUNDERLAND, DENMAN PICTURE HOUSES v. THOMPSON & COLLINS ENTERPRISES, [1929] 1 Ch. 483; 98 L. J. Ch. 109; 140 L. T. 463.

16a. Dramatic work—No "first publication" within 1911 Act, s. 1 (3)—Owner entitled to substituted copyright under 1911 Act, sched. 1.] —Under Dramatic Copyright Act, 1833 (c. 15), a foreign author dwelling outside British territory was entitled to secure dramatic copyright within the British Empire of the first performance of his play given in this country. By an agreement in writing dated June 30, 1898, G., the author & sole proprietor of the right to perform a certain play, granted to pltf. the sole & exclusive right to perform, or have performed, the play in Great Britain & Ireland. On Sept. 22, 1898, G.'s agent wrote to pltf. stating that the play had been first performed in Great Britain on a certain date & at a certain place:—Held: a copy of the letter of Sept. 22, 1898, the original having been lost, was admissible as evidence in a copyright action between pltf. & third parties who claimed a right to produce cinematograph films of the play under an agreement for value with G., dated Sept. 6, 1919, to prove that the first performance of the play took place in this country as stated in the letter since, (1) being written by G.'s agent, it constituted an admission by G., a person who, although not named on the record, had a substantial interest in the result, & (2) it constituted an admission by defts.' predecessors in title.

(3) An entry in the register of first performances of dramatic productions at Stationers' Hall is admissible in evidence as a public register. If such an entry is incorrect, the party producing a certified copy of it may be precluded from relying on it as primâ facie proof of a right to produce or reproduce the play to which it relates, but it can be regarded by the ct. as corroboration of other evidence of title.

(4) 1911 Act, s. 1 (1) (a) & s. 1 (3), which provide that copyright shall subsist in every dramatic work if it has been first published in His Majesty's dominions, but that the performance in public shall not be deemed to be publication, prescribe conditions for the future, but do not inflict them on past events so as to destroy existing rights.

(5) Where the owner of dramatic copyright possessed [by assignment] the sole right to perform, or permit the performance of, a certain play before 1911 Act came into operation he acquired, by sect. 2 (1) (b), coupled with sects. 24 & 35 of the Act, & sched. 1 to the Act, the right to the cinematograph & film rights of that play also.

An American corpn. made a film & sent a negative & two positives of it to an English co., who made further copies of the film & handed them to another English co., who let them to a British exhibitor. The American corpn. & the two British cos. were interworking organisations linked together by complex agreements, & they all three shared in part of the receipts from the exhibition of the film by the exhibitor. The exhibitor in exhibiting the film, infringed pltf.'s copyright:—Held: (6) the American corpn. & the two British cos. had actively directed, counselled or aided the infringement by the exhibitor, & had infringed pltf.'s rights within 1911 Act, s. 2 (1), the operative effect of which sub-sect. is extended & not limited by sect. 2 (2) & (3).

(7) Where an infringement of copyright is proved under 1911 Act, s. 2 (1), the question of knowledge of infringement by the infringer does not arise except possibly with reference to the exemption from penalties for infringement provided by sect. 8 of the Act.—FALCON v. FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM CO., LTD., [1926] K. Such a letter is not contrary to public policy as being in restraint of trade.

43b. —— Single sentence.]—Pltf. had, since 1925, dealt with the treatment of the human face, & had advertised extensively in connection with that treatment. He claimed to have the copyright in a slogan in connection with those advertisements. The phrase was, "Beauty is a social necessity, not a luxury." Sometimes there were variations in the words used. Sometimes the words "youthfulness," or "good looks," or "youthful appearance" were substituted for "beauty." In May 1926 deft. inserted an advertisement containing the phrase "A youthful appearance is a social necessity." Some years before 1925 an advertiser had used a similar phrase, "Beauty is a modern necessity":—Held: (1) the only originality, if any, in pltf.'s phrase consisted in the substitution of the word "social" for the word "modern," & pltf.'s phrase was not an original composition; (2) although copyright might subsist in an advertisement, to quote a piece of a sentence from a literary work was too small a matter to afford ground for an action for infringement of copyright; (3) the doctrine de minimis non lex curat applied, & the matter in which copyright was claimed was too small for the ct. to attach any importance to it.—SINANIDE v. LA MAISON KOSMEO (1928), 139 L. 77a. —— —— For type—Protected.]—Pltf. co. which carried on the business of supplying cutter-crush machines & type & other materials used therewith, issued a catalogue consisting for the most part of a number of words which illustrated the products of the several sizes & shapes of type supplied by the co. & customers ordered a particular class of type by referring to such words. Nearly all the words were selected by the managing director of the co. In 1922 defts., who were carrying on a similar business, circulated price lists which were practically copies of the price lists of pltf. co., the words used in pltf. co.'s catalogue & price lists to indicate the style of type being copied in defts.' price lists without alteration. Pltf. co. commenced proceedings for an injunction to restrain infringement of copyright in their catalogue & passing off of goods which were not their goods as being their goods. On the question of copyright defts. contended (inter alia) that pltfs.' catalogue was a design or collection of designs capable of registration under Patents & Designs Acts, 1907 (c. 29), & 1919 (c. 80), & not the subject of protection under 1911 Act:—Held: on the question of copyright the contentions put forward by defts. failed, & an injunction restraining infringement of the copyright of pltfs. in their catalogue was granted.—MASSON SEELEY & CO., LTD. v. EMBOSOTYPE MANUFACTURING CO. 85a. Programmes.]—Pltfs. were a limited co. formed to acquire the Postmaster-General's licence for the establishment & working of broadcasting stations, & to carry on any other business ancillary, incidental, or conducive thereto. Under the terms of their licence & a supplementary agreement pltfs. were required to transmit efficiently every day a programme of broadcast matter to the reasonable satisfaction of the Postmaster-General. They were not allowed to alter their memorandum as to objects without his written consent. He might revoke their licence if they failed to transmit satisfactory programmes, & within one month from their ceasing to hold the licence they were bound to pass a special resolution for voluntary winding up. Their profits from all sources beyond a 7½ per cent. cumulative dividend on their paid-up capital belonged to the Postmaster-General. Nine months after the licence, with the approval of the Postmaster-General pltfs. began publishing the Radio Times every Friday, including therein the advance daily programmes for the ensuing week Sunday to Saturday. These programmes gave the day & hour of each performance, the artist's name, appropriate headings for items or groups of items, &

PART II. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 2.—C. 54 i. Immoral works.]—There is nothing in the Copyright Act to deny an author a copyright on the grounds that his work is indecent, obscene or immoral. Where his work is of such a character that the law will not permit him to publish it, the cts. will deny him damages, since if he cannot sell it he cannot prove damages. But apart from damages, there is no reason why the pirating of an author's original work should not be restrained by injunction, provided it is honest work, & not a fraud on the public.—PASICKNIAK v. DOJACEK, [1928] 2 D. translations of unfamiliar foreign titles of songs or music. The preparation, arrangement, & editing of the actual programmes involved considerable time, skill, labour & expense, although the preliminary work of fixing the days & hours, engaging the artists, & choosing the items had all been done some time beforehand. Defts. having selected & copied numerous items from a set of advance programmes so published, pltfs. sued for infringement of copyright:—Held: (1) whether there was or was not copyright in an individual programme, there was undoubtedly copyright in the compilation of the seven advance programmes; (2) although the programmes were subject to the approval or veto of the Postmaster-General, who had power to revoke the licence if they included improper matter, they were not a work "prepared or published by or under" his "direction or control" within 1911 Act, s. 18, & so long as pltfs. were allowed to trade & publish them, the copyright belonged to pltfs. & not to the Crown. 99a. —— Of descriptive character.]—(1) A song which relates the burning of a ship at sea, & the escape of those on board, describes their feelings in vehement language, & sometimes expresses them in the supposed words of the suffering parties, is dramatic, & therefore at all events within the meaning of the statute, though it be sung only by one person, sitting at a piano, giving effect to the verses by his delivery, but not assisted by scenery or appropriate dress.

111a. —— Wolf-cub head for Boy Scouts' pole—1911 Act, s. 22.]—Apart from 1911 Act, s. 22, a model of a wolf-cub's head produced from a mould in papier mache & intended to be displayed as their totem on the tops of poles by the Boy Scouts Assocn., is an artistic work in which copyright would subsist under that Act. But, as the model consisted of "features of shape, configuration, pattern, or ornament applied to any article" of manufacture or artificial substance by an industrial process, & was therefore a design within Patents & Designs Act, 1907 (c. 29), s. 93, as amended by Patents & Designs Act, 1919 (c. 80), s. 19, & consequently was capable of being registered under the Act of 1907 &, further, was not a design which was "not used or intended to be used as a model or pattern to be multiplied by any industrial process," it was by Copyright Act, 1911 (c. 46), s. 22, excluded from the operation of that Act & not the subject of copyright thereunder.

In an action by pltfs. for infringement of copyright which they claimed in the model, against the defts. who admittedly had copied & reproduced the model:—Held: for the reasons stated above, pltfs. had no copyright in the model under 1911 Act, & the design not having been registered as a design under the Patents & Designs Act, 1907 (c. 29), the action failed.

Semble: if pltfs. had had copyright in the model, the defts. could not successfully plead, under 1911 Act, s. 8, that they had no reasonable ground for suspecting the subsistence of copyright in the model owing to the absence of registration marks under Patents & Designs Act, 1907 (c. 29), under which they alleged that in their view of the law the model was capable of registration, since, relying upon that view, they abstained from making any inquiries whether copyright in the model was claimed.—PYTRAM, LTD. v. MODELS (LEICESTER), LTD., [1930] 1 Ch. 639; 99 L. 118a. Adaptation of old play—Original musical composition.]—1911 Act has extended the protection of copyright, & there is musical copyright in an arrangement of previous music which amounts to a new work.

Pltf. composed music for an opera which was an adaptation of an old play. Defts. prepared an orchestral score from the same source, records of which they offered to the trade. Pltf. complained that defts. were passing off these records as records of pltf.'s music:—Held: defts. had borrowed from pltf.'s work in a way which was more than mere coincidence, & had infringed pltf.'s copyright.—AUSTIN v. COLUMBIA GRAPHOPHONE CO. 305a. Grant of licence giving sole & exclusive right of representation—Assignment.]—Applt. was the composer of the music of a French opera, an English version of which was produced at a London theatre on the terms of an agreement of Mar. 23, 1905. By this agreement, made between the composer (the applt.) & the authors of the opera (thereinafter called "the licencors") of the one part & the proprietor of the theatre (thereinafter called "the licencee") of the other part, after reciting that the licencors had delivered the play to the licencee, with the score of the music, with a view to its production in London & elsewhere "on the terms hereinafter mentioned," the licencors granted the licencee the sole & exclusive right of representing the play in the U.K., America, & the British Colonies & Dominions. The agreement further provided that the copyright in the music of the play should remain the property of applt.; that on the failure of the licencee to produce the play in London within a certain time all rights of representation as aforesaid should revert to & become again the absolute property of the licencors; that the licencee should pay to the licencors as royalties certain percentages of the gross profits; that the licencee should keep proper books showing the gross receipts of the theatres at which the play should be represented, & that the licencors should be entitled to inspect the books, so as to enable them to verify the amount of the percentage payable to them. Resps., in pursuance of a permission granted to them by a theatrical co., to whom on the death of the licencee the benefit of the agreement had been assigned by his exors., gave a broadcast performance of the opera at their studio in London. In an action by applt. against resps. for infringement of copyright:—Held: upon the construction of the agreement, (1) it operated as an absolute assignment of the performing rights of the opera within the prescribed area & was not a mere licence, & (2) it was not limited to representations on the stage of a theatre, & the action failed.—MESSAGER v. BRITISH BROADCASTING CO., [1929] A. Defts. fulfilled the specified condition. In an action by pltf. claiming a declaration that she had the sole right to perform the work by means of cinematograph films:—Held: the entire performing rights in the play became vested in defts. by virtue of the agreement, & when 1911 Act came into operation the right so vested included the right to the cinematograph reproduction of the play; & therefore pltf.'s action failed.—BARSTOW v. TERRY, [1924] 2 Ch. 316; 93 L. acquired under the Act of 1911 before Dec. 6, 1921, shall not be affected by the repeal, preserves rights the inception of which was before that date although they have been assigned after it.

The Judicial Committee, although of opinion that the judgment of the Supreme Court was wrong in holding that the appellants were not entitled to any remedy in respect of an infringement in 1926 of their rights under 1911 Act, advised that the judgment should be discharged only so far as it dealt with costs, as the Copyright (Preservation) Act, 1929, passed by the Irish Free State legislature after the grant of special leave to appeal, while enacting that rights under 1911 Act were to be deemed always to have subsisted in the Irish Free State, provided by sect. 4 that no remedy or relief should be granted in respect of any infringement which had there taken place before the passing of the Act.

(2) A local authority commits an infringement under 1911 Act, s. 2 (1), if a band which it has engaged to perform in public plays, without consent, copyrighted musical works which are included in a programme approved by the local authority, & the performance is for the "private profit" of the local authority, within sect. 2 (3), although any profit resulting will be applied to the relief of ratepayers.—PERFORMING RIGHT SOCIETY, LTD. v. BRAY URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL, [1930] A. Defts., who were the occupiers of a dancing hall, engaged on the terms of a written agreement a band to provide music therein. The agreement provided that the band should not, in the music played, infringe any copyright, & should be liable for damages & costs caused by any infringement. There was also a notice posted in the hall that "only such music as may be played without fee or licence is allowed to be played in this hall." On one occasion the band played certain music, the copyright of which belonged to pltfs., without pltfs.' licence; but defts. did not know, & had no reasonable ground for suspecting, that this infringement would take place. In an action by pltfs. for damages & an injunction:—Held: on its true construction, the agreement between defts. & the band constituted the latter the servant of defts., & not independent contractors; the band on the occasion in question were acting in the course of their employment; defts. were liable under 1911 Act, s. 2, for the infringement of copyright; & pltfs. were entitled to damages & an injunction.—PERFORMING RIGHT SOCIETY, LTD. v. MITCHELL & BOOKER (PALAIS DE DANSE), LTD., [1924] 1 K. 486 i. By mechanical contrivance—Consent to manufacture.]—Deft. applt. made certain gramophone records in New South Wales of a song in which pltf.'s copyright existed, & which, apart from Copyright Act, 1912, s. 19, would have been an infringement of pltf.'s copyright. Gramophone records of the song in which pltf.'s copyright existed had been made in England, & also in America with the consent of the owner of the copyright before the alleged infringement in New South Wales:—Held: proof of the consent given by pltf. resp. to the manufacture of contrivances in England was sufficient to satisfy the condition imposed by British Copyright Act, 1911, s. 19 (2) (a); Federal Copyright Act, 1912, brings into force in Australia British Copyright Act, 1911, & consequently, the making of contrivances, with the consent of the owners of the copyright, in any part of the area to which the Act applies, releases the work throughout the area of the operation of the Act.—GRAMOPHONE Co., LTD. v. LEO FEIST INCORPORATED, [1928] V. 513a. —— —— ——.]—Pltfs. were the publishers of a magazine, published in America at frequent intervals, called "Adventure." Defts. proposed to publish a monthly magazine called "Hutchinson's Adventure Story Magazine." In an action by pltfs. to restrain such publication:—Held: where any one adopted a descriptive word, as pltfs. had done, they must not object if other persons made use of it, as descriptive of similar articles; pltfs. had no monopoly of the word "Adventure," & on the evidence no real confusion existed between pltfs.' & defts.' periodicals.—RIDGWAY CO. v. HUTCHINSON (1923), 40 R. P. C. 335.

523a. —— Title of film.]—(1) Pltfs. who were the trustees of the will of the late S. H., the author of a play called "The Younger Generation," brought this action to restrain defts., Film Booking Offices, Ltd. & Universal Pictures, Ltd., from selling, letting for hire or exhibiting in public a cinematograph film under the title "The Younger Generation" in such a way as to represent to the trade or public that such cinematograph film was a film version of the play by S. H. The play was first performed in Manchester in 1910, & in 1912 it was produced in London & subsequently was performed at intervals by touring companies up to the commencement of the action. The play was published in 1910 & the demand for copies was still active. There was a continuing demand for the play in respect of amateur performances. Three films having nothing in common with the subject-matter of, & from their nature unlikely to be confused with, the pltfs.' play had been shown in this country under the title "The Younger Generation" in the years 1913, 1915, & 1926. Defts.' film was released for exhibition to the public in Sept. 1929:—Held: the evidence fell short of establishing the fact that the title "The Younger Generation" used in connection with a film meant in the mind of the film-going public a film based on the play of that name by S. H.

(2) Defts., Universal Pictures, Ltd., by their defence denied all liability to pltfs., & at the same time paid five guineas into ct. in satisfaction of any claim for damages & offered to submit to an injunction or to give an undertaking in the terms claimed by pltfs. Upon the undertaking being drawn up these defts. refused to pay pltfs. the costs of a motion for an interlocutory injunction which they contended should be apportioned between defts. Accordingly the action was continued against these defts. No order was made on the motion except costs to be costs in the action. The action against both defts. was dismissed with costs.—HOUGHTON v. FILM BOOKING OFFICES, LTD. (1931), 48 R. P. C. 329.

Defts. afterwards published & sold two drawings, which were made by alterations of pltf.'s original drawings, but which had titles different from the titles of pltf.'s drawings. Defts. did not in any way expressly represent that the drawings made by such alterations were pltf.'s. Pltf. brought against defts. a passing-off action in which she alleged that her work had a distinctive character & could be recognised without bearing her name, & she claimed an injunction & penalties under sect. 7 of the above Act:—Held: to satisfy the sect. there must be a selling or publishing in conditions under which, to the knowledge of the seller or publisher, there was made either expressly or by necessary implication a representation that the author was the author of the work in the form in which it was sold or published, & since, although there was in many of pltf.'s productions a measure of distinctiveness, the mere seeing of defts.' productions did not necessarily suggest the inference that they were the unaltered work of pltf., the action failed.—PRESTON v. RAPHAEL TUCK & SONS, [1926] Ch. 667; 95 L. 152a. Summoning "regular jurymen" — Improper.]—(1) Semble : for a coroner before an inquest is held to take a person who is subsequently to serve on the jury, & privately investigate with him any of the facts of the case, whether or not it can be shown that there was anything in the nature of discussion between them, is contrary to public policy, "misconduct" at common law, & ground for quashing the inquisition under Coroners Act, 1887 (c. 71), s. 6 (1).

(2) Semble : the fact that at a view, by a coroner's jury, of the scene of a collision where two vehicles had collided, a police constable, who had already been sworn & given evidence at the inquest, was allowed to point out to the jury where had been the marks in the roadway of the two vehicles which were said to have met, & where one of the vehicles had come to rest, the distance between which points the jury measured, is ground for quashing an inquisition under sect. 6, sub-sect. (1), of the Coroners Act, 1887 (c. 71), s. 6 (1).

The ct. expressed the following opinions :—

(3) The practice of summoning eleven jurors to serve on a coroner's jury from a list or panel of only sixteen or seventeen persons in a large city so that some of the same persons are summoned time after time, is very objectionable, & is contrary to the principle of the jury system. The practice of calling a small panel of "regular jurymen," whether or not it is illegal, is improper.

(4) Probably, as a general rule, it is better that a coroner should not accompany his jury upon a view of the scene of a collision between vehicles or upon a view of the vehicles. (5) But if he does so accompany the jury he should carefully abstain from any discussion of the case with the jury at such view.

(6) A coroner is not bound to allow others, such as those concerned or their representatives, to be present on such a view by the jury. It is a matter for his discretion.

(7) There is no statutory requirement that the depositions of a witness at the coroner's ct. should be read over to him. The High Ct. has no right to add such a requirement to those which Parliament has enacted. But if a coroner thinks there is any uncertainty as to what a witness meant, & particularly if a witness, before he signs his deposition, requests that it be read over to him, the coroner ought to do so. No doubt a witness would be entitled to refuse to sign until this had been done.—R. v. DIVINE, Ex p. WALTON, [1930] 2 K. B. 29 ; 99 L. J. K. B. 433 ; 143 L. T. 235 ; 94 J. P. 129 ; 46 T. L. R. 321 ; 28 L. G. R. 283, D. C.

156a. ——.]—The failure by a coroner at an inquest to view the body makes the inquest a nullity, & is not merely an irregularity giving the ct. a discretion as to whether it will order another inquest, &, since on such failure there has been no inquest, the ct. will quash the proceedings before the coroner & order an inquest to be held.—R. v. HASLEWOOD, Ex p. MARGERISON, [1926] 2 K. Her body had been subjected to a post-mortem examination by the Govt. medical officer, & buried soon afterwards, without having been viewed by resp. At the inquiry, resp. was asked by counsel, on behalf of a subpœnaed witness, whether he had received a request in writing, but refused to give any such information. Upon application by the witness in question for a prohibition directed to resp., & restraining him from proceeding further with the inquiry :—Held : it was immaterial whether he had received a written request to hold such inquest, since his jurisdiction arose independently of it ; notwithstanding the abolition of the coroner's jury by Inquests of Death Act, 1866, s. 5, he had no jurisdiction to hold the inquiry except super visum corporis ; & appt. was entitled to prohibition. —R. v. STAINES, Ex p. O'CONNOR (1930), S. 340a. —— ——.]—Trade Union Act, 1871 (c. 31), s. 14, & sched. 1 (6), gives every member of a trade union a right to inspect the books of the union, "under proper conditions." That right entitles a member to inspect them by a skilled accountant, but the accountant should not be objectionable to the union on personal grounds, & should undertake not to disclose the information obtained by him except to his client. The fact that the trade union officials believe that the member desiring to inspect the books by an accountant is acting mala fide, & for purposes hostile to the union, does not give them an implied discretion to refuse the inspection. The onus of establishing that the right of inspection should not be exercised lies on the trade union.—DODD v. AMALGAMATED MARINE WORKERS' UNION, [1924] 1 Ch. 116; 93 L. J. Ch. 100; 129 L. 986a. Expenses of running omnibuses—Power to run omnibuses on authorised routes—Omnibuses run to connect up authorised routes.]—The corpn. of L., a municipal corpn., had by virtue of their special Act power to maintain & run a service of omnibuses within the city or outside the city boundaries. In the latter case, their special powers only extended to the running of omnibuses along the route of any tramways which the corpn. should be authorised to construct. There were in fact two such authorised tramway routes. The expenditure in connection with the running of these authorised tramways could, under the corpn.'s statutory powers, be borne out of the city fund. The corpn. began an omnibus service in pursuance of their statutory powers, but it appeared that for a very small portion of the omnibus route, namely, for a distance of forty yards, the service of omnibuses ran outside the boundaries of the city, joining up with the tramway routes slightly further on, & that the expenses in connection therewith were borne by the city fund. An action was commenced by a ratepayer for a declaration (inter alia) that the running of these omnibuses over this particular stretch, & payment of the expenses in connection therewith out of the city fund, was ultra vires the statutory powers of the corpn., & ought to be prohibited. The question at issue was whether, so far as the forty yards stretch was concerned, the corpn. were entitled to spend moneys out of the city fund in connecting an authorised route of omnibuses outside the city with a route of omnibuses within the city boundaries. Under their statutory powers the corpn.'s service of omnibuses along the route of a tramway outside the city which they were authorised to construct was a part of their tramways undertaking, & they were also authorised to apply the city fund in discharging the expenses in connection with the tramways undertaking:—Held: the expense of running omnibuses over the forty yards so as to connect the two routes was an expense fairly incidental to the tramways undertaking, & that it was not ultra vires the corpn.'s statutory powers to expend any part of the city fund in working & running the omnibuses over the forty yards which connected the two services, & which were branches of the corpn.'s tramways undertaking.—A.-G. v. LEEDS CORPN., [1929] 2 Ch. 291; 99 L. Purchase of land for street widening & pleasure garden—Subsequent use of pleasure garden for street widening.]—A local authority bought land in 1896 for the purposes of: (a) street widening; (b) making new streets; (c) providing public walks & pleasure gardens. The land was conveyed to the local authority for the purposes authorised by the Public Health Acts. A plan & specifications were submitted to the Local Government Board, & subsequently the scheme was carried out in accordance with the plan & specifications. The pleasure gardens were surrounded by railings, & were not dedicated or open to the public. In 1927 the local authority resolved to utilise one of the pleasure grounds for the purpose of street widening & providing a parking place for motor cars. Objections were raised by some of the occupiers of adjoining premises, & an action was brought to restrain the local authority from carrying out their resolution:—Held: as one of the purposes for which the land was acquired was street widening, the local authority was

71a. Question of repairs—Under Increase of Rent & Mortgage Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1920 (c. 17).]—Deft. was the tenant of a tied public-house with living accommodation, of which pltfs. were the landlords. In 1910, the house was let to deft. at a rent of £75 per annum for three years. At all material times the ratable value was £68. After certain intermediate tenancies at rents less than two-thirds of the ratable value, deft. in Dec. 1920, took from pltfs. a new lease : "To hold the said premises with the appurtenances unto the tenant from Mar. 25, 1920, for the term of seven years . . . at the yearly rent of £120." The reason for the increased rent was a trade revival which had caused a great improvement in the licensed trade of the house. The conditions of the new lease as to repairs were more onerous for the tenant than those of the old. In an action by the landlords for rent, the tenant contended that the repairing clause amounted to a prohibited increase :—Held : the question as to repairs could only be decided by the county ct., & the High Ct. had no jurisdiction on this point.—BRAKSPEAR (W. 139a. —— —— Issue of summons before leave obtained—Irregularity.]—On Jan. 30, 1924, a tenant of a dwelling-house within the Rent Restrictions Acts lodged two plaints in the West London county ct., the one under sect. 12 (3) of the Act of 1920 for apportionment of rent, & the other under sect. 14 (1) of the same Act for certain sums paid by him in respect of rent which, as he alleged, was irrecoverable by his landlord. These sums were, by sect. 8 (2) of the Act of 1923, recoverable on or before Jan. 31, 1924, but not afterwards. The claim for apportionment could regularly be brought in the West London ct., but the claim for repayment could not be brought in that ct. without the leave of the judge or registrar on an application supported by an affidavit. No affidavit was sworn until Feb. 5, 1924. Notwithstanding this the plaint was entered, a plaint note under the seal of the ct. was given to pltf., & a summons was issued, all bearing the date Jan. 30, 1924. By Ord. 7, r. 2, a summons to appear to a plaint shall be dated of the day on which the plaint was entered, & the date thereof shall be the commencement of the action :—Held : (1) the irregular entry of the plaint & issue of the summons before the necessary leave had been obtained did not deprive the county ct. of jurisdiction to hear the action, but the irregularity could be waived by deft.; (2) as deft. had appeared to the summons & raised a defence in no way challenging the jurisdiction of the ct., he had waived the irregularity; the action must therefore be taken to have commenced on Jan. 30, & pltf. was entitled to recover.—PRINGLE v. HALES, [1925] 1 K. 198a. Duty of judge to make order—On proof of right to possession.]—The words "may order" in 1888 Act, s. 138, are enabling words only, but where the legal right of a landlord to the possession of premises has been established it is the duty of the judge, notwithstanding the permissive form of the sect., to make an order for possession. In exercising the discretion given him as to the period for the coming into operation of the order, the judge must fix a period reasonably adjusted to the circumstances of the case, including the nature & term of the tenancy. The county ct. judge in two cases of weekly tenants whose tenancies had been validly terminated by notice to quit, refused to make any order in one case, & in the other, while making an order, postponed its operation for twelve months :—Held : this was not a judicial exercise of his discretion, in either case.—SHEFFIELD CORPN. v. LUXFORD, SAME v. MORRELL, [1929] 2 K. 206a. Claim for declaration.]—(1) The county ct. has no jurisdiction to entertain a claim for a declaration in an action in which no sum of money is claimed. Stiles v. Ecclestone, No. 211, post, overd.

Upon a contract for the sale of real property at a price exceeding £500 the vendor brought an action in the county ct. against the purchaser, claiming a declaration that deft. had forfeited the deposit paid under the contract by deft. to stake-holders, who were not parties to the action, & that he was entitled to receive payment of the deposit from the stake-holders. No other claim appeared in the plaint or the summons or the particulars of claim :—Held : the county ct. had no jurisdiction to entertain the claim, (1) on the above ground, & (2) on the further ground that the claim was for partial specific performance of an agreement for the sale of property within 1888 Act, s. 67, where the purchase-money exceeded £500, the amount limited by that sect.—DE VRIES v. SMALLRIDGE, [1928] 1 K. Deft. alleged in defence that the sum claimed had been paid to him as wages ; &, further, that the county ct. had no jurisdiction, the question between the parties being a dispute concerning wages within above sect. which could only be dealt with by a superintendent thereunder. At the trial it was found as a fact that the sum claimed had been lent to deft., & that there was no real dispute concerning wages :—Held : the county ct. had jurisdiction to entertain the action notwithstanding the sect., inasmuch as that ct. had all along had jurisdiction to entertain an action for money lent & the sect. did not either expressly or by implication exclude that jurisdiction ; &, 373a. On jurisdiction of county court—Reduction of claim for damages—Alternative claim for injunction.]—Where an action, commenced in the High Ct., has been transferred to a county ct. under 1919 Act, s. 1, the effect of sect. 4 of that Act is to give the county ct. jurisdiction to deal with the matter equal to or the same as that of the High Ct.

Pltf. & deft. entered into an agreement, which provided that in the event of any breach thereof by deft. he should pay to pltf. in respect of each such breach a sum of £150 by way of agreed & liquidated damages. Pltf. alleged that deft. had broken the agreement, & he brought an action in the High Ct. claiming the sum of £150 & an injunction. Pltf. afterwards applied, under 1919 Act, s. 1, to have the action remitted to a county ct., reducing the money claim to £90, & claiming an injunction in the alternative. The master made an order for remittal. Pltf. then delivered particulars of claim, asking for £90 damages or in the alternative an injunction. He admitted, however, that the real object of the action was to obtain an injunction. On the action coming on for trial the county ct. judge declined jurisdiction on the ground that in substance the action was for an injunction alone. On appeal to a Div. Ct., that ct. held that the county ct. judge had jurisdiction to entertain the action, & sent it back to him for trial:—Held : the decision of the Div. Ct. was correct.—DAVEY v. ROBINSON, [1923] 1 K. B. 563; 92 L. J. K. B. 336; 128 L. T. 513; 39 T. L. R. 163; 67 Sol. Jo. 246, C. A.

410a. Discretion of county court judge—To deprive successful party of costs.]—Where a pltf. has begun an action in the High Ct. & within twenty-one days from issue of the writ has obtained, under R. S. C., Ord. 14, an order in respect of part of his claim whereby he may sign judgment for £20 or upwards either unconditionally or unless that sum is paid into ct. or to pltf.'s solr., & the remainder of pltf.'s claim is remitted to a county ct. with leave to defend, the judge of the county ct. has the same jurisdiction as a judge of the High Ct. over the costs of the whole proceedings, & he may order them to be taxed on the High Ct. or on the county ct. scale. But in deciding the scale on which they are to be taxed he must exercise his discretion judicially, & he is not entitled to deprive pltf. of the High Ct. costs of the High Ct. proceedings unless pltf. has been guilty of some misconduct.—JENKINS & CO. v. SIMON, [1926] 1 K. 497a. —— Application under Administration of Justice Act, 1920 (c. 81), s. 3—Discretion of judge to order trial without jury.]—On May 10, 1923, pltf. commenced proceedings claiming from defts. damages for personal injuries caused by the alleged negligence of defts.' servants. Defts. filed a defence denying negligence & afterwards gave pltf. notice of an application to dispense with a jury. The application for trial without a jury was made under the above sect. The county ct. judge, without giving any reasons for his decision, ordered the trial of the action without a jury, & pltf. appealed against that order & alleged that the learned judge had not properly exercised his discretion:—Held: the above sect. did not give the county ct. judge an absolute power to order the trial of an action without a jury; the sect. gave him a discretion which must be exercised judicially; in this case there were no proper materials on which the learned judge could exercise his discretion judicially; it would not be a proper exercise of the learned judge's judicial discretion to dispense with a jury merely because it was inconvenient; on the other hand it is not necessary for the judge to give his reasons for dispensing with a jury, but there must be some grounds for so exercising his discretion.—WINN v. LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL (1923), 130 L. Further, the fact that the lists are congested is not a ground on which the county ct. judge is entitled to suspend a litigant's right to trial by jury.—CALCRAFT v. LONDON GENERAL OMNIBUS CO., [1923] 2 K. The particulars of claim stated that neither the value nor the reserved rent of the dominant tenement exceeded £100 per annum, but did not state the value or reserved rent of the servient tenement. The judge allowed two amendments of the particulars of the claim, the first, a statement that the damages claimed were £25; & the second, an allegation that neither the value nor the reserved rent of the servient tenement exceeded the value of £100 by the year:—Held: the county ct. judge had power under the above sect. to make the second amendment, & the first amendment also.—UPTON v. FARMER (1930), 142 L. 648a. —— Sum deposited by claimant to goods less than value of goods—More than judgment debt & costs.]—Goods which had been taken in execution under a county ct. judgment were claimed by a claimant. The execution creditor did not admit the claim & claimant deposited with the bailiff under 1888 Act, s. 156, the sum of £26 which was considerably less than the value of the goods claimed, but was more than sufficient to cover the judgment debt & costs of the execution. The money was paid into ct. by the bailiff, who remained in possession of the goods, & an interpleader summons was issued. Before the return day of the interpleader summons the execution creditor gave notice that he admitted the title of claimant to the goods, & the bailiff withdrew from possession. Upon the taxation of the costs the bailiff claimed possession fees up to the date when the execution creditor admitted claimant's title, upon the ground that under sect. 156 he was bound to remain in possession until the amount of the value of the goods was deposited with him:—Held: as the £26 was deposited with & taken by the bailiff under sect. 156 of the Act, he must be deemed to have taken it upon the assumption that it represented the amount of the value of the goods, & therefore he had no right to remain in possession or to possession fees after the date of the deposit.—NEWSUM, SONS & CO., LTD. v. JAMES, [1909] 2 K. At the trial of the action in the county ct. the judge held that both sides were to blame, & gave judgment for defts., but allowed no costs. On appeal on the question of costs:—Held: on the facts found at the trial there had been negligence on the part of pltf.'s wife, & therefore pltf. could not have succeeded whether there had or had not been negligence on the part of defts., & the county ct. judge had no discretion to deprive the successful defts. of their costs.—JACKSON v. ANGLO-AMERICAN OIL CO., [1923] 2 K. 783a. Order for payment of possession fees of high bailiff—Under Ord. 27, r. 1 (2).]—(1) A Div. Ct. has jurisdiction to hear an appeal from the decision of a county ct. judge who, under the above sub-rule has, on the application of the high bailiff, made an order against the execution creditors, who have directed the high bailiff to withdraw, for the payment of his fees.

On May 15, 1924, the high bailiff of a county ct. under a warrant of execution purported to levy upon the goods of judgment debtors at their premises, & put a man in possession. The sheriff was then in possession of the goods under process of an earlier date, but not to the knowledge of the high bailiff, as the county ct. judge found. The high bailiff on taking possession received from judgment debtors a document which stated that in consideration of his withdrawing from possession they authorised him at any time to re-enter & undertook not to remove any of the goods. On June 12, 1924, the high bailiff on the instruction of the judgment creditors withdrew from possession. The execution was ineffective, except in so far as it brought the parties into negotiation with a view to a settlement. The high bailiff made an application to the county ct. judge under the above rule, for an order for payment by the judgment creditors of his fees for keeping possession from May 15 to June 12. The county ct. judge found that the high bailiff did not withdraw from possession, but was in actual possession & not in mere walking possession of the goods, & made an order for payment of the fees claimed:—Held: (2) the possession of the sheriff did not in the circumstances prevent the high bailiff from taking & keeping such possession as would entitle him to claim fees; (3) there was evidence to support the finding of the county ct. judge that the high bailiff did not withdraw from possession, but kept actual as distinct from walking possession; & therefore the order of the county ct. was right. —A. o i. —— ——.]—The general rule that when on a trial for murder the Crown succeeds in establishing such a primâ facie case as, in the absence of any explanation, will justify the jury in finding the accused guilty of murder, the burden then devolves upon him of making out such circumstances of alleviation, excuse or justification as will afford a foundation for his defence, does not apply to the case where such circumstances arise out of the evidence against him. Therefore, where various circumstances were brought out in the course of the Crown's own case which bore materially on the question of the accused's intent, & the issue was raised thereon whether the Crown had adduced sufficient proof to discharge its own burden of establishing the offence of murder :—Held : the judge in charging the jury should have given them to understand, without imposing any onus on the accused, that if, in view of such circumstances, they entertained any reasonable doubt as to the prisoner having a murderous intent, they could not properly find him guilty of murder.—R. v. PRIMAK, [1930] 1 W. There was conflict between the evidence of the accused & that of the police officer who instructed him. The magistrate convicted the accused, stating he was relieved from weighing the evidence of the police officer & the other witnesses, as the evidence showed that accused helped to commit the crime :—Held : reversing the decision of the magistrate, if accused's evidence is believed, what he did was not with the intention of committing felony, but with the intention of helping the police.—R. v. GILMORE (1930), 43 B. (1923), I. L. R. 7 Lah. 50.—IND.

303 viii. ——— ———.]—The accused appealed from his conviction for murder. It had been contended in his defence that at the time of his act his condition from drink was such that the act could not be murder; & he alleged misdirection by the trial judge to the jury on this question, which involved the law as to what state of incapacity resulting from drink will reduce a crime from murder to manslaughter :—Held : in the circumstances of the case, an essential question for the jury was : given the existence of some degree of capacity in the accused, & assuming the facts deposed to by Crown witnesses, if credited, in describing the accused's act in striking the fatal blow & his conduct & expressions before & after that act, whether or not he was so affected by drink as to be incapable of having the intent to kill or of having the intent, in reckless disregard of the consequences, to cause some bodily injury, "known" to him to be "likely to cause death." That question was one upon which the jury must pass in order to enable them to determine the existence or non-existence of the intent in fact. As the trial judge, while properly directing the jury's attention to the defence as put forward by accused's counsel, that accused was in such a state that his mind was not functioning, that his "mind was gone," that he was incapable of a degree of "thought" enabling him to be aware of the nature of his physical acts, did not direct them to the question above defined, there should be a new trial.—MACASKILL v. R., [1931] S. The letters, which were couched in obscene & lecherous terms, purported to be written by a woman, & invited the recipient to come to the place where the accused lived, & to have immoral relations. The recipient, on reading them, believed they were written by a woman. He did not go to the place where the accused lived, & no meeting between them took place. The accused was charged with attempting to procure the commission of an act of gross indecency by the recipient of the letters with himself. At the trial the jury were asked to say only (i) whether the accused was the writer of the letters, & (ii) if so, whether the letters amounted to an attempt to procure the commission of the offence charged. The jury received no direction in regard to what was necessary in law to constitute an attempt, as distinguished from mere intention, to commit an offence. The jury convicted the accused :—Held : the accused's acts were only remotely, & not immediately, connected with the commission of the offence, & the jury should have been directed that such acts did not in law constitute an attempt to procure the commission of the offence charged. He was not informed of his right to trial by a jury on appearing before the ct., before the charge was gone into, but he was so informed afterwards, when all the evidence had been heard, but before the ct. had announced their decision. Deft. protested twice by his solr. that he could not at that stage be put to this election, but on being informed by the chairman that if he did not elect, the case would be sent for trial, he stated by his solr. that he would be dealt with summarily. Deft. was then convicted & fined :—Held : the proceedings were a nullity as the giving of that information to the person charged on his appearing before the ct., "before the charge is gone into," in accordance with Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (c. 49), s. 17, is a condition precedent to the validity of the subsequent proceedings. placed under arrest by an executive officer of the ship, &, some days later, by which time the vessel had arrived in Torbay, he was apprehended by the Devon police & charged before the justices, who committed him for trial at the Devon quarter sessions. The indictment charged an offence contrary to Larceny Act, 1916 (c. 50), s. 17 (1) (a), committed on the high seas. Prisoner was arraigned & pleaded not guilty & a jury was impanelled, but quarter sessions declined to proceed with the indictment upon the ground that Larceny Act, 1861 (c. 96), s. 115, which was said to give them jurisdiction, did not extend to offences committed in estuaries or rivers in Scotland, & that the offence charged was properly triable only by the Scottish cts. :—Held: quarter sessions had jurisdiction to try the indictment inasmuch as it alleged an offence which, by virtue of Naval Discipline Act, 1866 (c. 109), was committed within the jurisdiction of the Admlty. of England, & therefore, being an offence mentioned in Larceny Act, 1861, it was triable, under sect. 115 of that Act, in the county where the offender was apprehended.—R. v. DEVON JJ., Ex p. PUBLIC PROSECUTIONS DIRECTOR, [1924] 1 K. 2204a. —— —— Wrong statute inserted—Later statute in similar words.]—The accused, who was a trustee under a will, was charged with having in Mar. 1916, fraudulently converted to his own use certain shares deposited with him by a co-trustee. In an affidavit filed by the accused in defence to proceedings for an account commenced against him by the co-trustee in the Ch. Div., the accused swore that he had, with the approval of his co-trustee, invested the capital in his own business. Subsequently, in his preliminary examination in bkpcy., he made admissions to the Official Receiver in regard to the disposition of the capital by him. He was indicted for fraudulent conversion as a trustee under Larceny Act, 1916 (c. 50), s. 21, but the judge, on his notice being brought to the fact that that Act was not in force at the time when the offence was alleged to have been committed, allowed the indictment to be amended by the substitution of Larceny Act, 1861 (c. 96), s. 80, for the later statute. The two statutes define the offence in almost precisely the same words :—Held : (1) the indictment was defective within Indictments Act, 1915 (c. 90), s. 5 (1), by reason of the wrong statute having been inserted, but in view of the fact that the offence under the earlier Act was defined in almost the same words as those used in the later Act, applt. could not have been prejudiced by the amendment, nor could injustice have been done to any defence that he might have had. The amendment was, therefore, rightly allowed ; (2) the accused was not protected from prosecution by Larceny Act, 1861 (c. 96), s. 85, either in regard to acts disclosed by his affidavit or in regard to acts disclosed by his preliminary examination in bkpcy., as such disclosures were not " in consequence of any compulsory process of any court of law " ; (3) the admissions in the preliminary examination in bkpcy. were not admissions made " in any compulsory examination or deposition before any ct. on the hearing of any matter in bkcpy.," & could, therefore, be given in evidence at the trial without infringing Larceny Act, 1916 (c. 50), s. 43 (3).—R. v. TUTTLE (1929), 140 L. 2219a. ——.]—Applt. was accused of having obtained sums of money by way of deposit from persons, who desired to be employed as managers of public-houses, by representing to them that he would appoint them to those positions. The indictment contained eighteen counts, relating to nine distinct offences, which were charged alternatively as obtaining sums of money by false pretences, & as larceny by a trick of the same sums. In every one of the counts relating to false pretences, the indictment as originally framed ran : " by falsely pretending that he would appoint . . . as manager." At the close of the case for the prosecution the judge thought it right to amend the counts relating to false pretences so as to read " by falsely pretending that he was in a position to appoint," etc. The jury convicted applt. on all counts :—Held : (1) the conviction for false pretences must be quashed, as the amendment of an indictment allowed by Indictments Act, 1915 (c. 90), s. 5 (1), is an amendment of a defect in form, & not the alteration & revision of the substance of a charge, such as had taken place in this case, which must necessarily prejudice accused ; (2) the conviction for larceny must be quashed, because there was no evidence of larceny, as the persons seeking employment had in each case intended to part with their money ; (3) Larceny Act, 1916 (c. 50), s. 44 (3), could not apply where the indictment had charged false pretences & was up to the last moment wrong in substance.—R. v. HUGHES (1927), 136 L. 3156f. —— ——.]—(1) A prisoner was charged with two distinct sexual offences, one against a young boy, & the other against a girl aged five. The charges were included in one indictment & were tried together. In his summing-up the judge referred first to the evidence relating to one offence, & subsequently to the evidence relating to the other, but he did not warn the jury that they must be careful to distinguish the evidence relating to one offence from the evidence relating to the other, & that they must not supplement the evidence in regard to one of the offences by looking at the evidence as a whole, nor were the jury directed to find separate verdicts on each charge:—Held: the conviction must be quashed.

(2) With regard to the offence against the girl, corroboration was required by Children Act, 1908 (c. 67), s. 30, & there was evidence which might be regarded as corroboration of her story. The judge, in his summing-up, referred to this evidence, but made no reference either to the statute or to the necessity for corroboration in this case:—Held: though the mere omission to refer to the statute would not in itself be a ground for quashing the conviction, yet since neither the statute nor the necessity for corroboration had been brought to the attention of the jury, the conviction must be quashed on that ground also.

4816 i. Admissibility under Children Act, 1908 (c. 67), s. 30—Conditions of reception.]—Held: the purpose of sect. 30 of Children Act, 1908, was to enable a child " of tender years," age not defined by the statute, who does not, in the opinion of the ct., understand the nature of an oath, to give evidence not upon oath if, in the opinion of the ct., the child has sufficient intelligence to justify the reception of the evidence & understands the duty of speaking the truth. The sect. did not alter the previous law as to the reception of the evidence of children on oath, which was & is a question, not of age, but of the intelligence & actual mental capacity of the child witness, his sense & reason of the danger & impiety of falsehood. Strictly speaking, the objection to the reception of the child's evidence on oath should be taken, & the witness interrogated by the ct., on the voir dire, but the practice became established that the objection might be taken on facts elicited, after the person was sworn as witness, during the direct examination or even during the cross-examination, &, if it prevailed, the judge would strike out the evidence & withdraw it from the jury.—A.-G. v. O'SULLIVAN, [1930] I. sb. Under Probation of Offenders Act, 1907 (c. 17).]—A licensed publican pleaded guilty to opening his licensed premises for the sale of intoxicating liquor during prohibited hours. His house was well conducted, & this was his first offence. The magistrate having given deft. the benefit of the above Act:—Held: as there was nothing in the evidence as to character to bring the case within sect. 1, & the offence was not a trivial one, & there were no extenuating circumstances, the magistrate was not correct in law in giving deft. the benefit of the Act.

Before a magistrate deals with a case under the above Act, he should be satisfied that the case falls under one of the specific heads of sect. 1, & should state explicitly on which of the grounds he relies if he exercises the discretion conferred on him by the Act.—GILROY v. BRENNAN, [1926] I. person, & he was released on July 23, 1924. From Sept. to Dec. 1924 he was in honest employment. He committed the shop-breaking for which he had now been sentenced on Jan. 2, 1925:—Held: it was questionable whether, on these facts, the jury could properly have found applt. to be a habitual criminal, but if they had done so it must be on a direction to them that the burden of proof always rested on the prosecution to show that during the relevant period applt. had been leading, persistently, a dishonest or criminal life; as there were passages in the summing up which might have conveyed to the jury that, when the prosecution had gone a certain length, the burden rested on applt. to show that he had turned over a new leaf, the conviction must be quashed.—R. v. DRISCOLL (1925), 89 J. 5361a. —— ——.]—Before a sentence of preventive detention can be passed three things are requisite: first, that prisoner shall have been convicted of being a habitual criminal; secondly, that the ct. shall have taken such a view of the substantive crime of which prisoner has then been convicted as to think it right, by reason of that crime & not for any other reason, to pass a sentence of penal servitude; & thirdly, that the ct., in the exercise of its independent discretion, shall be of opinion that by reason of the criminal habits & mode of life of prisoner it is expedient for the protection of the public that he should be kept in detention for a lengthened period of years. a vi. ——.]—The general appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Ct. of Canada is confined to civil matters; to found an appeal to the ct. in any criminal matter, resort must be had to some special statutory provision enacted by the Dominion Parliament. Save for the special case provided for by sect. 1025 of the Criminal Code, the only right of appeal to the ct. in any criminal cause is that conferred by sect. 1023. For an appeal to come within sect. 1023, the conviction must have been affirmed by the ct. below & there must have been dissent by some member thereof on a question of law.—STEINBERG v. R., [1931] S. C. R. 421; 4 D. L. R. 8.—CAN.

a vii. ——.]—An appeal from the judgment of Appellate Div. Ont. affirming applt.'s conviction for stealing was dismissed, on the ground that there was no jurisdiction to hear the appeal, the questions raised, & on which there was dissent in the Appellate Div., being all questions of fact, in regard to which there was no right of appeal to this ct. Assuming that the question whether there was any evidence to support a conviction should be deemed a question of law, yet the question whether the proper inference has been drawn by the trial judge from facts established in evidence, is not a question of law but one of fact.—GAUTHIER v. R., [1931] S. This evidence was not officially recorded in Irish as given, but only as it was translated into English, & objection to the transcript was taken on behalf of the accused, who sought leave to amend their notices of application for leave to appeal (which had already been served) by including this objection:—Held: as it is not an essential requisite for the purpose of an application for leave to appeal to have a complete transcript or any transcript of the evidence before the ct., the ct., being satisfied that the transcript of the note of the interpreter's rendering of the evidence was a completely accurate record & fully adequate for the purpose of disposing of the applications for leave to appeal, & having regard to all the facts, refused to allow the notices of application for leave to appeal to be amended.—A.-G. v. JOYCE, A.-G. v. WALSH, [1929] I. 9154a. —— Detention after receipt of remission marks.]—M. was convicted in Dec. 1925, of certain misdemeanours & sentenced to two years' imprisonment with hard labour & twelve months' imprisonment, the sentences to run consecutively. An order was made by the ct. directing that he should be detained in prison in conformity with the sentences passed. He was first detained in Portsmouth Prison & afterwards in Pentonville Prison. In Dec. 1927, after M. had been removed to Pentonville Prison, the Governor of Portsmouth Prison indorsed on M.'s stage card the forfeiture of five remission marks, to make it agree with M.'s record. There was a dispute whether or not the Governor of Portsmouth Prison had ordered the forfeiture of those marks on May 10, 1926, & the jury differed with regard to it. As a result of the forfeiture of those five marks M. was released by the Governor of Pentonville Prison on July 21, 1928, instead of on July 20. On Aug. 2, 1928, M. brought an action against the Governors of both prisons to recover damages for his detention in prison during that one day. The jury found that the Governor of Portsmouth Prison had not acted maliciously nor with intention to injure M. & that he had not made a false statement:—Held: the Prison Rules did not confer upon M. any legal right to an earlier discharge by the obtaining of remission marks, & that therefore the action could not succeed against either of the Governors; having regard to the findings of the jury the action could not succeed against the Governor of Portsmouth Prison; the Governor of Pentonville Prison was protected, as he had merely acted in pursuance of the order of the ct.—MORRISS v. WINTER, [1930] 1 K. Further, that the fact that the prisoner when he was charged by a police officer & cautioned made no denial of the charge was also corroboration of her story:—Held: both directions were wrong. Any inference as to what the girl told her mother could not amount to corroboration of the girl's story, as it proceeded from the girl herself, & the girl could not corroborate herself. 9320a. ——.]—In charges of sexual offences corroboration of the testimony of prosecutrix is not in law essential, but is in practice required.

If, on the trial of such a charge, there is corroboration on one count referring to one date, but there is none on another about another date, & the ct. rejects the corroboration on the former, it being possible that the jury gave credit to it on both counts, it may quash a conviction on both.—R. v. BERRY (1924), 18 Cr. When H. presented the draft at L. Bank, Ltd., Liverpool, payment was refused. On a charge against F. under Criminal Code, s. 355, for converting the money to his own use & for failing to account for it, it was found by the trial judge that F., Ltd., was an alias for F. himself; that F. knew of the transaction carried out by his clerk; that F., Ltd., had no credit either at L. He was present when police officers discovered in an old underground working on a mining lease of which he was the holder a lighted furnace, which was well hidden, & a considerable quantity of gold-bearing ore in a crucible in the furnace. Applt. stated he had abandoned the lease, denied all knowledge of the existence of the furnace, expressed his opinion that the gold had been stolen, & blamed some Indian miners who were in the vicinity:—Held: (1) applt. was the tenant of premises upon which gold reasonably suspected of being stolen or unlawfully obtained was found, & that by Police Act Amendment Act, 1902, s. 3, the onus of proving he was not in possession of such gold lay on applt.; (2) applt. had failed to prove that he was not in possession of such gold.—HOEPNER v. MANNING, [1929] W. The accused induced one B. to agree to buy for $21,000 certain land, worth not more than $3,300, by representing to B. that another man had already taken an option to buy the land for $31,000. B. had never seen the land & knew nothing of its value. In pursuance of the scheme, the accused had given an option to one W. & introduced him to B. as a bond fide purchaser at the advanced price, when in fact he was but a dummy with whom it had been arranged that he should make a substantial payment on the purchase from B. practically out of B.'s own money, & then default on the contract. 224a. —— —— Appointment of receiver for debenture holders.]—Contempt of ct. may include conduct which, while it cannot directly influence a judge's mind, is calculated to affect the conduct of parties to proceedings, & the ct.'s jurisdiction to commit for contempt is not confined to cases in which its orders may directly be affected.

On the application of pltfs. in a debenture holders' action, a receiver of the shipping co. was appointed on the ground of jeopardy. A director of a co. which managed the shipping co.'s business, who was also a guarantor of debentures issued by the shipping co., authorised newspapers to publish interviews in which he adversely criticized the conduct of pltfs. in having obtained the appointment of a receiver, & he further stated that by so doing they had " smashed the goodwill & organisation of the business in a day " & that " no one in shipping circles can understand this line of conduct." The interviews did not state that the appointment was on the ground of jeopardy or that, as was the fact, the co. could not continue to carry on business unless money was immediately found. On a motion by pltfs. for an order to commit the director, & also the managing editor & the owners & publishers of the newspapers :—Held : the publication of injurious misrepresentations concerning parties to proceedings in relation to those proceedings may amount to contempt of ct., because it may cause those parties to discontinue or to compromise, & because it may deter persons with good causes of action from coming to the ct., & is thus likely to Pltf.'s solr. made various but futile efforts to obtain the fruits of the judgment. Deft. disobeyed a bkpcy. notice & an order for payment of the judgment debt & costs by instalments. Several judgment summonses were obtained against deft., but deft. evaded service of them. Eventually pltf.'s solr. served deft. with a judgment summons within the precincts of a ct. of justice where deft. was waiting for a case, in which he was pltf., to be called on. 801. For the existing paragraph in original volume substitute as follows :—

From order declaring prisoner's right to liberty—Order not directing discharge—Order of Court of Appeal—No appeal to House of Lords.]—No appeal lies from an order of a competent ct. for the issue of a writ of habeas corpus where the ct. determines the illegality of appct.'s detention & his right to liberty, although the order does not direct his discharge.

Upon the application of a man whom the Home Secretary had caused to be arrested & deported to Dublin, where he was interned by the Govt. of the Irish Free State, the Ct. of Appeal, reversing the decision of the Div. Ct., granted an order nisi, which they subsequently made absolute, for the issue of a writ of habeas corpus directed to the Home Secretary, the ct. holding that the detention was illegal as the Home Secretary had no power to order a person to be interned in the Irish Free State; &, owing to a doubt whether the Home Secretary had control of the body, the order allowed him a week within which to make his return to the writ. Before the week had elapsed an appeal by the Home Secretary to the House of Lords was heard on the question of competency :—Held : notwithstanding the generality of the language of Appellate Jurisdiction Act, 1876 (c. 59), s. 3, the House had no jurisdiction to entertain the appeal.—Secretary of State for Home Affairs v. O'Brien, [1923] A. 1141a. Income Tax Act, 1918 (c. 40), s. 125, Sched. A., No. V., rr. 7, 8—Remedy by way of appeal.]—As a result of information disclosed in connection with a claim to relief for the year 1920–21 under the above r. 8 the Inspector of Taxes discovered that the rents of certain properties had been increased during that year & that, by the above r. 7 (2), the owners were not entitled to the deductions in respect of repairs which had previously been granted from the Sched. A. assessments on the properties for that year. Additional assessments to income tax, Sched. A., were accordingly made in respect of the tax undercharged, & the Inspector of Taxes refused to certify the claim under r. 8 on the ground that relief under that rule applied only to assessments which were reduced for purposes of collection under r. 7. Notice of appeal was given by the owners against the additional assessments & against the refusal of the Inspector to certify the claim under r. 8, but at the owners' request the hearing of the appeals was postponed pending the decision of the ct. on rules nisi, which the owners had applied for & obtained, calling upon (a) the General Comrs. & the Inspector of Taxes to show cause why a writ of prohibition should not issue, prohibiting them from proceeding with the additional assessments; & (b) the Inspector of Taxes to show cause why writs of certiorari & mandamus should not issue, quashing his refusal to certify the claim under r. 8, & commanding him to furnish the requisite certificate in connection with the claim:—Held: discharging the rules nisi, the General Comrs. & the Inspector of Taxes had acted within their jurisdiction, &, as the statute prescribed procedure for appealing against the additional assessments & against the Inspector's refusal to certify the claim under r. 8, prohibition, certiorari & mandamus would not lie.—R. v. KINGSLAND PARISH INSPECTOR OF TAXES, Ex p. PEARSON, KINGSLAND ESTATE, R. v. KINGSLAND PARISH INCOME TAX COMRS. & INSPECTOR OF TAXES (1922), 8 Tax Cas. 327.

1230a. —— No fresh grounds for rehearing advanced.]—Appct. was the owner of certain houses situated in West Norfolk. These houses were entered in the valuation list for 1929 at £30 gross & at £22 rateable value. On July 30, 1929, appct. made a proposal in writing to the rating authority for the amendment of the list under Rating & Valuation Act, 1925 (c. 90), s. 37 (1), with the result that the assessments were reduced to £25 gross & £18 rateable value. Not being satisfied with that decision, appct., acting under sect. 37 (8) of the Act, on Nov. 18, gave notice of appeal to the clerk of the peace, but by reason of delay a copy of such notice was not served on the assessment committee within the period specified in Sched. V., Part I. of the Act & the appeal was withdrawn. A second proposal was then made by appct. on Dec. 30, 1929, for the amendment of the valuation list upon the ground (inter alia) that the assessment was excessive, but without proposing what the amendment should be. On Feb. 7, 1930, the rating authority caused notice to be served on the appct. that they intended to object to appct.'s proposal on the ground that the present assessments were fair & reasonable. The proposal then came before the assessment committee on Feb. 18, 1930, when the chairman intimated that the committee refused to give a decision or to hear & determine the said proposal, whereupon the appct. applied for a rule nisi for a mandamus :—Held : the assessment committee ought in fulfilment of their statutory duty to have heard & determined the application made to them, but appct. had not satisfied the ct. that there were any merits additional to those put forward at the first hearing, & on that ground the ct. in its discretion refused to make the rule absolute. —R. v. West Norfolk Assessment Committee, Ex p. Ward (F. 2735a. —— Order of County Council—Improper grant of cinematograph licence.]—It was the practice of a certain County Council, in granting licences to use premises for cinematograph exhibitions, to impose the condition that the premises should not be so used on Sundays, Christmas Day or Good Friday; but also to entertain applications for permission to open the premises for cinematograph entertainments on those days. A co. applied for a licence to open & use premises for cinematograph entertainments, & also for permission to open the premises for such purposes on Sundays, Christmas Day & Good Friday. In compliance with this application the County Council made an order to the effect that, "subject to arrangements at the premises being completed to its satisfaction, the Council will take no action for the present in the event of the above named premises being opened for cinematograph entertainments on Sundays, Christmas Day & Good Friday as from & including Sunday, July 6, 1930, provided: (i.) that a sum of £35 be paid to charity in respect of each Sunday, Christmas Day & Good Friday on which the premises are opened for cinematograph entertainments." The permission was also subject to conditions relating to the auditing of receipts & expenses, the character & hours of the entertainments, & the employment of servants :—Held : a writ of certiorari should issue to bring up & quash the order of the County Council as having been made without jurisdiction, the council having no power to dispense with the provisions of the Sunday Observance Act, 1780 (c. 49).

I am unable to distinguish in principle between the application for a licence under Cinematograph Act, 1909 (c. 30), & an application made with regard to a licence for a public-house, which for many years . . . has been held to be a judicial act (SLESSER, L.J.).—R. v. LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL, Ex p. ENTERTAINMENTS PROTECTION ASSOCN., LTD., [1931] 2 K. 2736a. —— Certificate of Post Office medical officer—Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84).]—Appct., a telegraphist in the employment of the Postmaster-General, complained to the Post Office medical officer at G. that she was suffering from telegraphist's cramp. In accordance with the regulations of the Post Office medical service, the case was referred to the chief medical officer, who had special knowledge of telegraphist's cramp, & he certified that appct. was not suffering from it :—Held : (1) the giving of a certificate was a judicial act, in respect of which certiorari would lie; (2) it issued ex debito justitiæ at the instance of an aggrieved person; (3) an appeal to a medical referee under sect. 43 (1) (f) of the above Act was not equally beneficial, since he could only deal with the medical correctness of the certificate & could not inqure into its validity.—R. v. POSTMASTER-GENERAL Ex p. CARMICHAEL, [1928] 1 K. 544a. ——.]—Pltfs., shipowners, chartered a steamer to defts. to carry a cargo of timber from the Baltic to Hull. The charterparty contained a clause as follows : "Cargo to be loaded & discharged with customary steamship dispatch according to the custom of the respective ports. The cargo to be brought to & taken from alongside the steamer at charterer's risk & expense as customary." The steamer discharged the cargo at Hull in due course, but disputes arose between pltfs. & defts. as to the division of the cost of discharging the cargo. Pltfs. brought an action to recover a sum which they had paid in effecting the discharge which they said should have been paid by defts. Defts. refused to pay on the ground that by the custom of the port of Hull the expense in question should be borne by the shipowners : —Held : the custom relied on by defts. was inconsistent with the language of the charterparty & was not admissible in order to decide upon whom the expense in question should rest.—REDERI AKT. 635a. Lancashire—Weaving trade—Deduction for bad work in estimating value of work to be paid for.]—Pltf. was a weaver in defts.' employment & his wages were calculated on the amount & kind of cloth woven in each week in accordance with a uniform list of prices agreed between the employers' & workmen's unions. According to the list of prices, pltf. became entitled for the week ending Aug. 1, 1928, after agreed deductions, to a sum of £2 5*s.* 0½*d.*, but defts. only paid him £2 4*s.* 0½*d.*, claiming the right to deduct 1*s.* in respect of three yards of cloth woven with a fault rendering them unmerchantable. The evidence showed that it had been the practice of the mill for many years to make deductions for work not done with reasonable care & skill, the deductions not exceeding in amount the loss sustained by the employers & often not being exacted. A similar usage existed in the bulk of the mills carrying on the Lancashire weaving trade, though some of the mill owners were trying to do without deductions:—Held: the established practice in defts.' mill resulted in the incorporation in the contract of employment of pltf. as of all other weavers employed at the mill of a term enabling the employers to make a deduction, not exceeding the actual or estimated loss occasioned, from the specific sum payable for each piece of cloth woven, if the workman did not exercise reasonable care & skill in weaving the cloth.

A usage in the Lancashire weaving mills allowing an employer to make at his discretion deductions from wages for bad work, not exceeding a certain defined limit, is neither unreasonable nor uncertain; & the fact that it at present exists at about 85 per cent. only of the mills does not prevent it from being a good legal usage on the ground of want of universality (per CUR.).—SAGAR v. RIDEHALGH (H.) & SON, LTD., [1931] 1 Ch. 310; 100 L. 27 i. Application of rule—In tort—Property destroyed by fire.]—Where damages were recovered for loss through destruction of property by fire caused by deft.'s negligence :—Held : the measure of damages was not the cost of replacing the property destroyed, but the value of the property as it stood at the time of the destruction. The cost of replacing may be taken into account in arriving at such value.—STEVENS v. ABBOTSFORD LUMBER CO., [1924] 1 D. L. R. 1163; 1 W. W. R. 660; 33 B. C. R. 299.—CAN.

74 i. Cause of action independent of damage—Whether prospective damage recoverable—Repudiation of contract.]—Defts., the owners of a cotton ginning mill, contracted in Oct. 1919, that, for a period of six months, they would put their mill at the disposal of pltf., a cotton merchant, for half its working time, at fixed rates in order to gin raw cotton which pltf. contemplated buying & which he agreed to supply to them for the purpose. In Nov. before any of pltf.'s cotton had been taken by the mill, defts. repudiated the contract. Pltf. sued defts. for damages :—Held : the breach being anticipatory the damages recoverable were not confined to the extra cost which pltf. had paid to the other millers for ginning such cotton as he had tendered to defts., but were the estimated loss of profit to pltf. by reason of the contract not being carried out ; pltf. was not bound to buy cotton & have it ginned at other mills under his obligation to mitigate the damages.—RAMGOPAL v. DHANJI JADHAVJI BHATIA (1928), L. Pltf. claimed damages under Fatal Accidents Act, 1846 (c. 93), for negligence causing the death of his wife :—Held : pltf. would establish a cause of action if he established that the death of his wife resulted from the shock occasioned by negligence involved in the running away of the lorry, that the shock resulted from what pltf.'s wife either saw or realised by her unaided senses & not from something which some one told her, & that the shock was due to a reasonable fear of immediate personal injury either to herself or to her children.—HAMBROOK v. STOKES BROTHERS, [1925] 1 K. 149 i. —— Nervous shock—Actual impact.]—Damages claimed for nervous shock, as a result of an accident arising from negligence, cannot be recovered where the nervous shock produces only a mental disturbance unaccompanied by any actual physical injury. If impact is not necessary, it is a question of fact in each case whether or not pltf. sustained physical injury & whether such injury was the natural & reasonable result of deft.'s negligence. —HOGAN v. R., [1924] 2 D. 149 iv. —— ——.]—A man & a woman to whom he was engaged were knocked down by a motor omnibus. The man was struck by the omnibus & received considerable physical injury. The woman did not appear to have been actually struck, & she received no direct physical injury, but she suffered severely from shock. In an action of damages at her instance the judge directed the jury that, if by the fault of defts. pursuer had suffered nervous shock through apprehension for her own safety, they were entitled, in assessing damages, to include any aggravation of that shock occasioned by the fact that her companion was involved in the catastrophe. The jury found that pursuer had suffered personal injury resulting in nervous shock involving apprehension for her own safety, aggravated by anxiety for the safety of her companion, & awarded damages :—Held : in the circumstances the jury could not be asked to discriminate between the amount of shock suffered by pursuer due to apprehension for her own safety & the amount due to anxiety for her companion.—CURRIE v. WARDROP, [1927] S. C. 538.—SCOT.

162 i. Loss of or injury to property—Collision at sea—Loss of musical manuscripts.]—In an action of damages against steamship owners, arising out of the sinking of one of their ships, pursuer claimed £15,000 in respect of the loss of certain music & orchestral settings in manuscript used by a concert party of which she was manager. She averred that the lost manuscripts were the sole copies of the compositions in question, & that she had the sole right to publish, perform, or issue mechanical reproductions, & to obtain copyright thereof. The compositions had cost pursuer about £2,000, but she averred that, through her concert party, they had acquired a reputation among the public which had greatly enhanced their value, & she further averred that she would have made substantial profits from the lost music in respect of copyright royalties, publication & sale, & disposal of performing & mechanical rights, apart from the use of it by her concert party : —Held : (1) pursuer's averments as to loss of contingent profits from copyright royalties, publication & sale, & disposal of performing & mechanical rights, were irrelevant ; (2) the measure of her damages in respect of the lost music was the cost of its replacement as nearly as might be, ascertained either by the market price of actual replacement, or by consideration of the commission which would have to be paid to composers of music of the class to which the lost compositions belonged. —REAVIS v. CLAN LINE STEAMERS, LTD., [1926] S. C. 215.—SCOT.

181a. —— ——.]—Pltf., an actress, was engaged by defts. to play in a play for the period of rehearsal & for the run of the play, & there was a collateral agreement that defts. would advertise her in a prominent position. Defts. refused to allow pltf. to play, but they paid her the whole of her salary down to the end of the run of the play. In an action for breach of contract the jury awarded to pltf., over & above her salary already paid, damages for loss of reputation through her not being employed to play the part :—Held : as there was an express agreement to advertise pltf. this necessarily implied an obligation to give pltf. an opportunity of acting, & pltf. was entitled, in addition to her salary already paid, to the damages awarded by the jury for loss of reputation.—MARBÉ v. GEORGE EDWARDES (DALY'S THEATRE), LTD., [1928] 1 K. 181b. ——.]—Applts., theatrical producers, agreed to engage resp., an American actor, to play one of the three leading comedy parts in a musical play about to be produced at the London Hippodrome for six weeks certain at a salary of £55 per week, & the contract contained a provision prohibiting resp. during the continuance of his engagement from acting elsewhere without the consent of the applts. Resp. objected that the part assigned to him was not one of the three leading comedy parts &, on the refusal of applts. to recast him, declined to appear in the play & sued applts. for damages for breach of contract. At the trial of the action before a judge & jury the jury found for resp. for £1,000 damages for loss of publicity & for three weeks' salary & judgment was entered accordingly. sk. Depreciation in price—Machinery components purchased by vendor to perform contract.]—Held : the vendor was not entitled, as damages for breach of contract to purchase an ammonia gas compressing outfit, to a sum for loss through decrease in price of the parts purchased for the purpose of the contract, this not being a loss "directly & naturally resulting in the ordinary course of events from the buyer's breach of contract," as there was nothing in the negotiations for the contract to give the purchaser to understand that the vendor would have to go into the market & buy the various parts to make up the plant.—GENERAL SUPPLY CO. Deft. was found guilty of negligence, but the action by S. was dismissed on account of contributory negligence. The ct. awarded damages to the wife against deft. It was sought to give in evidence the wife's medical & hospital bills :—Held : the bills had been contracted by the wife as her husband's agent & were his liability alone.—SCOBLE v. WOODWARD, [1924] 1 W. Owing to the colouring matter with which the fur was dyed, the customer contracted a skin disease & brought an action against pltfs., claiming damages. Pltfs. informed deft. thereof & requested him to undertake the defence of the action. Deft. denied liability but never suggested that pltfs. had no answer to the action, with the result that pltfs. defended the action & a jury awarded the customer damages for her suffering, & pltfs. had to pay the costs of the action :—Held : pltfs. were entitled to recover from deft. the damages so awarded, together with the customer's taxed costs of the action & their own costs of defending the action as between solr. & client.—BENNETT (SIDNEY) LTD. v. KREEGER (1925), 41 T. 227a. —— Several sub-sales.]—Defts. sold skins to pltfs., who resold to a sub-vendee. That sub-vendee sold to a second sub-vendee, who sold one of the skins, which had been made into the collar of a fur coat, to a third sub-vendee. The third sub-vendee sold to a woman who wore the coat & developed dermatitis on the face in consequence of antimony contained in the skin. In each sale the vendor knew the particular purpose for which the goods were required by the purchaser, & there was an implied warranty that the goods were reasonably fit for such purpose. The ultimate purchaser brought an action for breach of contract against her supplier, the third sub-vendee. The third sub-vendee defended the action, & in so doing acted reasonably ; but in the result the ultimate purchaser recovered damages & costs against him. The third sub-vendee, who had incurred certain additional costs in connection with the action, claimed to be reimbursed by the second sub-vendee, & after some resistance, incurring further costs, the second sub-vendee paid. The second sub-vendee then claimed against the first sub-vendee, who after some dispute incurring further costs, also paid. The first sub-vendee claimed against pltfs., who, after taking advice, occasioning further costs, paid. Pltfs. sued defts. for breach of contract, claiming as damages the damages recovered by the ultimate purchaser, the costs on both sides in that action, & the costs of the intermediate actions :—Held : pltfs. were entitled to recover the damages which might reasonably be supposed to have been in the contemplation of the parties at the time of the contract ; the parties must have contemplated that damages would be claimed, if there were a breach of contract of the kind that had occurred, by parties separated by several contractual steps from each of the immediate parties to each of the contracts along the line ; pltfs.' damages should include (1) the damages recovered by the ultimate purchaser, (2) the costs on both sides in that action, inasmuch as it was reasonably defended, & (3) the costs of the intermediate actions, in so far as they were reasonably incurred.—KASLER & COHEN v. SLAVOUSKI, [1928] 1 K. 235a. —— Costs awarded in previous proceedings, but not recovered.]—Pltfs. sought to recover from defts., as special damage, the costs which they themselves had incurred in previous litigation in which they were defts. Pltfs. in the present action sent a motor lorry to be overhauled by defts. The repairs were carried out & the lorry was returned. Very shortly afterwards, while the lorry was in use on the highway, one of the wheels came off & damaged the van of pltf. in the previous litigation, who brought an action in the county ct. to recover damages against present pltfs. He won the action at the hearing, but the decision was reversed on appeal. He was a man of straw & unable to pay the costs incurred. Present pltfs. sued present defts. for damages for alleged breach of contract & negligence, & a common jury found in pltfs.' favour. After argument as to the right of pltfs. to recover as special damage against defts., on account of their breach of contract & negligence, the costs of all previous litigation :—Held : such damage was not too remote.—BRITANNIA HYGIENIC LAUNDRY CO. v. THORNYCROFT & CO. d i. —— Trespass — Abusive conduct].—An appeal from a judgment whereby pltf., in an action for trespass, was awarded vindictive damages in addition to special damages:—Held: in view of deft.'s persistence in trespassing in defiance of pltf.'s requests to desist, his violent & abusive conduct towards pltf., & the particularly injurious & malicious manner in which certain of the trespasses were committed, the allowance of vindictive damages was justified & the amount thereof should not be reduced.—SPENCER v. GRANT, [1928] 1 D. d ii. —— —— Violent behaviour.]—A city corpn., constructing a sewer, expropriated an easement over pltf.'s land for that purpose. Deft. contracted with the corpn. to construct that part of the sewer which ran through pltf.'s land. In performing his contract, deft. did not confine himself to that part of the land which was subject to the easement, but unlawfully cut down trees & deposited sand & silt upon the land outside the part subject to the easement, & thereby depreciated the value of the land:—Held: the amount of damages in such an action as this may be indefinitely enhanced by evidence of violent & arrogant conduct on the part of deft.—PAFFARD v. CAVOTTI, [1929] 1 D. 408a. Option to purchase—Profit on resale lost by improper withdrawal.] — Pltf., having an option from deft. to purchase a freehold house for £4,000, agreed to sell the property to S. for £4,500, & then wrote accepting deft.'s offer to sell the house. In the meantime deft. had sold the property to B. for £4,000 :—Held : as specific performance of the contract was impossible by reason of deft.'s own act, pltf. was entitled to recover from deft. as damages £500, the difference between the price at which the property was offered to pltf. & that at which pltf. contracted to sell it.—GOFFIN v. HOULDER (1920), 90 L. J. Ch. 488 ; 124 L. T. 145.

411a. Contract to print bank-notes—Unauthorised use of plates—Loss recoverable limited to payments made before reasonably possible to detect forgery.]—Pltfs., who acted as bankers to the Portuguese Govt., were authorised to issue notes as currency up to a certain limit. They were under a legal obligation to keep an amount of gold which bore a varying percentage to the amount of notes in circulation, but the currency had been inconvertible since 1891, & it was probable it would remain inconvertible for an indefinite time. The notes issued by pltfs. were the only legal tender in Portugal. Pltfs., who had their head office in Lisbon, in 1922 & 1924, entered into a contract with defts., who were printers in London, for the printing & supply of bank-notes. The plates from which the notes were printed were left in possession of defts., & were not to be used for any purpose other than a purpose authorised by the bank. By a criminal conspiracy in 1924 & 1925 on the part of a number of persons defts. were induced to print a large number of notes from those plates, or plates copied from them, purporting to be notes issued by pltf. bank, without the authority of the bank, & these unauthorised notes were delivered to the conspirators & put into circulation in Portugal. Upon discovery of the forgery in Dec. 1925, the bank issued a notice withdrawing all the notes of that issue—the V. da G. issue that had been forged, &, from Dec. 7 to Dec. 26, 1925, they paid in genuine notes for the unauthorised notes presented as well as for the genuine notes of that issue. From Dec. 1925, to the end of 1927 the exchange value of the escudo remained at ninety-six to the £1. In an action brought by pltfs. claiming damages for breach of contract, negligence & conversion, the judge gave judgment for pltfs. for £569,421 in

sd. Wrongful eviction of lessee.]—In regard to damages recoverable by a wrongfully evicted lessee, the case is governed by the general rule applicable to all breaches of contract, namely, that the party wronged is, so far as money can do it, to be placed in the same situation, with respect to damages, as if the contract had been performed. Compensation to the lessee will not be confined to the value of the unexpired term, but will include all loss naturally resulting from the eviction.—HAACK v. MARTIN, [1927] 3 D. L. sh. Breach of contract to summerfallow.]—A lessee under a crop-payment lease broke his covenant to summerfallow. The lessor, who had the work done at his own expense, contended that the delay in doing it would reduce the crops to be grown & claimed damages on that head :—Held : since it was impossible to say with any degree of certainty that the crops in the subsequent years would be less than they would have been had deft. performed his covenant, such damages could not be awarded.—UGLUM v. TORKELSON, [1930] 3 W. respect of breach of contract & conversion on the part of defts., holding that pltfs. were entitled to damages to the amount of the English exchange value of all the new genuine notes paid out by the bank to replace the false notes from Dec. 7, 1925, the date of the withdrawal of the V. da G. issue, to Dec. 16, 1925, but disallowed their claim for any new genuine notes so exchanged after that date, £80,000, on the ground that if pltfs. had acted reasonably, by that date, they could have obtained from defts. information as to tests, which would have enabled them to distinguish between the false & genuine notes presented for payment. Defts. appealed solely on the issue of damages, & pltfs. cross-appealed as to the deduction of £80,000 :—Held : the damage done to pltfs. by the calling in of the V. da G. issue, genuine & false, though this was a voluntary act on their part, was recoverable as damages from defts. up to the time that it was possible for pltfs. by reasonable exertions to have obtained from defts. information as to one of the tests which would have enabled them to distinguish between a large number of the genuine & false notes, & that this date was Dec. 9, 1925. Accordingly, defts. were responsible for the following damages : (a) the English exchange value of the genuine new notes issued in replacement of all unauthorised notes on Dec. 7, 8 & 9, (b) the English exchange value of genuine were notes issued in replacement after Dec. 9 of such unauthorised notes as could not have been discovered by that test until further tests could be ascertained, (c) for the cost of printing of notes in replacement of the new genuine notes issued in exchange for genuine notes of the V. da G. issue reasonably called in, & that these amounts should be assessed at £300,000.—BANCO DE PORTUGAL v. WATERLOW & SONS, LTD. Continuation of contract depending on third party.]—Defts. agreed in writing to purchase from pltfs. all the stores that they required in the United Kingdom for their vessels, pltfs.' profits on the net price invoiced by the manufacturers to pltfs. to be discussed every six months, & the agreement was to remain in force as long as another agreement between a third co. & defts. continued. This other agreement had been previously made on the same day, but it was not signed till the following day, & it was to remain in force for ten years unless certain payments were sooner made. After observing the agreement with pltfs. for five months defts. repudiated it :—Held : as the continuation of the agreement between pltfs. & defts. for more than six months depended on the volition of a third party, & as the agreement contained nothing to prevent defts. from buying their stores outside the United Kingdom, pltfs. were entitled only to damages in respect of a period of one month.—FRANCO-BRITISH SHIP STORE CO., LTD. v. COMPAGNIE DES CHARGEURS FRANÇAISE (1926), 42 T. 487a. —— —— ——.]—By a contract dated Oct. 19, 1928, pltf. agreed to sell to deft. all her right, title, & interest in a licensed house known as T. of which she was the licensee. The contract provided that the purchase-money should be paid "on or about" Nov. 10, 1928, & that deft. should forfeit the deposit of £120 which he had paid if he should fail to fulfil his part of the contract ; also that either party refusing to comply with or neglecting to perform any part of the agreement should pay to the other, on demand, the sum of £200. On Oct. 3, 1928, deft. had given to the brewers who were the freeholders of T. references which they had accepted by Oct. 10. He went to the magistrates' clerk & signed the ordinary notices on reference to a request for a temporary transfer on Nov. 10, & for full transfer on Dec. 8. At least a week before Nov. 10 deft. knew that he would be unable to complete the purchase of T. unless he could raise a loan. His brokers acting in the matter sent him a notice to attend on Nov. 10. He did so, & first saw the brewers, telling them that he could not complete, & that the notice of application for transfer would have to be withdrawn & another one given. He then arranged with pltf. that completion should take place on Dec. 8. Deft., however, did not attend to complete. On Dec. 22 deft. stated that he would complete on Jan. 30. In an action by pltf. for a declaration that the contract had been rescinded & the deposit of £120 forfeited, & for damages :—Held : under the terms of the contract, the sum of £200 damages was in the nature of a penalty, & therefore not recoverable.—LOCK v. BELL, [1931] 1 Ch. 35 ; 100 L. 4a. Right of Crown to legislate for protectorate—Notwithstanding grant of territory within protectorate.]—The legislative authority over the territory of a Crown Protectorate belongs to the Crown & is controllable only by the Imperial Parliament.

Under the Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1890 (c. 37), the prerogative power of legislation in respect of Protectorates is exercised by Orders in Council, & these Orders have statutory effect. A grant of land in a Protectorate by the Crown is an executive & not a legislative act, & cannot by itself impose a fetter on the legislative power of the Crown. Where therefore by a subsequent Order in Council the Crown has exercised legislative powers in respect of the land previously granted, the legislative power so exercised is valid. The doctrine of derogation from grant cannot be applied in the case of a grant by the Crown so as to deprive it of its paramount right to legislate for the Protectorate in which the subject of the grant is situate. The Crown cannot renounce or fetter its legislative authority by the mere fact that in the exercise of its prerogative it makes a grant of land within the territory over which the legislative authority exists.—NORTH CHARTERLAND EXPLORATION CO. 10a. —— ——.]—An extension of British jurisdiction in a British protectorate by Orders in Council may be referred to an exercise of power by an act of State, unchallengeable in any British ct., or to statutory powers given by Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1890 (c. 37), under which the jurisdiction acquired by the Crown in a protected country is indistinguishable in legal effect from that acquired by conquest. The Crown cannot, except by statute, deprive itself of freedom to make Orders in Council, even such as are inconsistent with previous Orders.

Before the conquest & annexation of the South African Republic Swaziland was an independent native State, treated as a protected dependency of that Republic, by which it was administered under a Convention made in 1894 between Great Britain & the Republic. The Convention provided for the preservation of native law, & the agricultural & grazing rights of the natives. The annexation did not extend to Swaziland. Subsequently under Orders in Council certain lands in Swaziland were expropriated to the Crown, to the extinguishment of the use & occupation of them by natives under native law, certain lands being allotted exclusively to the natives :—Held : the Orders in Council were effective, even if they were not within the powers recognised by the Convention.—SOBHUZA II. v. MILLER, [1926] A. In 1923 an Order in Council authorised the High Comr. for Palestine to promulgate such ordinances as might be necessary for the peace, good order, & government of the country, & were not inconsistent with the Mandate. The High Comr. promulgated an ordinance expropriating certain springs for the purpose of supplying water to Jerusalem, with certain provisions for compensation. In an action by the owners of the springs the Supreme Ct., sitting as a ct. of first instance, held that the ordinance was ultra vires, on

An Order in Council had made provision for appeals to the Privy Council, but only from orders of the Supreme Ct. sitting as a Ct. of Appeal:—Held: (1) the appeal was competent, since the jurisdiction under the Mandate was jurisdiction in a foreign country within the description in the preamble to Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1890 (c. 37); (2) it was the right & duty of the ct. to consider whether the ordinance was consistent with the Mandate, but art. 2 had been misconstrued, & the ordinance was valid; (3) art. 2 did not mean that in every case of expropriation for a public purpose full compensation must be given. Natural justice required that in the absence of exceptional circumstances, fair provision should be made for compensation, but that depended not upon civil right, but upon the principles of sound administration, & it was not within the province of the ct. to consider whether an ordinance was within those principles. Further, the ordinance did make adequate provision for compensation.—JERUSALEM-JAFFA DISTRICT GOVERNOR v. SULEIMAN MURRA, [1926] A. C. 321; 95 L. J. P. C. 46; 134 L. T. 609; 42 T. L. R. 299, P. C.

In 1923 applts. not having then constructed any works, the provincial Govt. granted to resps. a lease of the water power & bed of the river within limits which overlapped those referred to in applts.' letters patent. Applts. brought an action against resps., claiming a declaration that applts. had a vested right in the river to construct dams, & an injunction:—Held: the action failed, since the letters patent contained no grant of a proprietary right in, or power to take possession of, any part of the river or its bed.—UNITED MANUFACTURING CO. v. ST. 31a. Authority to promulgate Ordinance under Government of India Act, 1915, s. 72—Validity of Ordinance.]—In proceedings under an Ordinance promulgated by the Governor-General under the Government of India Act, 1915, s. 72, which authorises him in cases of emergency to promulgate Ordinances for the peace & good government of British India, it cannot be disputed that an emergency existed & that the Ordinance is one for the peace & good government of British India. Those are matters of which the Governor-General is sole judge; he is not bound to give any reasons for promulgating an Ordinance under the sect. An Ordinance so promulgated constituting a special tribunal for the trial of a criminal case is not invalid in that it deprives the accused of the right of appeal to the High Ct. which they would otherwise have had.—BHAGAT SINGH v. KING EMPEROR (1931), 58 L. 31b. Authority to promulgate Berar Alienated Villages Tenancy Law, 1921.]—Having regard to Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1890 (c. 57), s. 1, & the authority delegated to the Governor-General in Council by the Indian (Foreign Jurisdiction) Order, 1902, the Governor-General in Council had power to promulgate the Berar Alienated Villages Tenancy Law, 1921, relating to territory of H.H. the Nizam leased in perpetuity to the British Govt. The said Law of 1921 is not void under sect. 12 of the Act of 1890 so far as it is repugnant to the Waste Land Rules, 1865 (Berar), because the Acts, Orders & Regulations referred to in that sect. are Acts, Orders & Regulations applying to British subjects & do not include the said rules of 1865, which did not purport so to apply. Further, the said rules of 1865 were merely administrative orders. The Law of 1921, so promulgated, accordingly operates as a legislative Act, & effectively interferes with rights in property held under leases granted pursuant to the rules of 1865.—DATTATRAYA KRISHNA RAO KANE v. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA (1930), 57 L. Governor-General, is subject to threefold restrictions. There must be an "emergency" to justify the exercise of the power; the power can only be exercised for the peace & good government of British India or any part thereof; the Ordinance must not go beyond the power of the Indian Legislature to make laws. There being nothing in the language of sect. 72 to indicate that the Governor-General's opinion on the points referred to above is to be taken as final, the initial presumption is that a ct. of law will have jurisdiction to go into such matters if it becomes necessary to do so, in order to determine any question properly coming before it for decision.—DES RAJ v. R. Under Government of India Act, 1910, s. 72, the Governor-General is the sole judge of the existence of the emergency, & all cts. can do is to inquire whether there was evidence upon which the Governor-General might reasonably conclude that an emergency existed.—EMPEROR v. CHANAPPA SHANTIRAPPA (1930), I. 56a. —— Future exercise—Cannot be fettered.]—Acting within the constitution, the legislature of a self-governing Colony or State is supreme, & no act of the executive Govt. can fetter in any legal sense the future exercise of its powers, or give to any person a title other than such as could be conferred under existing legislation.

When New South Wales Consitution Act, 1855, was enacted, Garden Island, in Port Jackson, was part of the waste lands of the Crown, the entire management & control of which were vested by sect. 2 of that Act in the legislature of the Colony. By notices published in 1865 & 1866, pursuant to Crown Lands Alienation Act, 1861 (N.S.W.), the island was dedicated as a naval depot. It continued to be so used by the Imperial naval authorities until 1913, but since that date it had been occupied by the Commonwealth naval authorities for the use of the naval forces which it provided & maintained. An Imperial Order in Council made in 1899 under Colonial Fortifications Act, 1877, recited an agreement by which the Government of New South Wales were to erect buildings & carry out works, partly on Garden Island, & the Imperial Government agreed that when the buildings & works were completed & the sites "conveyed, granted, or dedicated in perpetuity for the use of Her Majesty's navy in the same way as Garden Island had been," the Imperial Government would surrender certain lands which were not within 1855 Act, s. 2; the Order then, in consideration of the agreement, vested the lands in the Government of New South Wales. In 1923 the Minister administering the Crown Lands Consolidation Act, 1913 (N.S.W.), acting under sect. 25 of that Act, revoked the dedication of Garden Island:—Held: the recital in the Order in Council of 1899 did not preclude the Minister from revoking the dedication in the manner provided by the Act of 1913, & the revocation was effectual under sect. 25 of that Act, although the notice did not state the manner in which it was proposed to deal with the island. Judgment of the High Ct. affirmed, subject to the declaration made, that resp. State was entitled to possession of Garden Island, being varied to a declaration, in the words of Crown Lands Consolidation Act, 1913, s. 25, that by virtue of the revocation the island had become Crown lands within that Act, & liable to be dealt with in accordance therewith.—AUSTRALIA COMMONWEALTH v. NEW SOUTH WALES STATE, [1929] A. The royal assent to the Criminal Code could not give validity to an enactment which was void by Imperial statute; exclusion of the prerogative could be accomplished only by an Imperial statute.

According to the well-settled practice of the Judicial Committee His Majesty is advised to intervene in a criminal case only if it is shown that, by a disregard of the power of legal process, or by some violation of natural justice, or otherwise, substantial & grave injustice has been done.

Applt. was convicted in Alberta of an offence under Govt. Liquor Control Act of Alberta, which did not incorporate sect. 1025 of the Criminal Code of Canada, & of an offence under Canada Temperance Act, R. S. Can., 1906 (c. 152). For each offence he was sentenced to a fine, & in default imprisonment. The Supreme Ct. of Alberta, rejecting contentions as to the construction & invalidity of the material sects., affirmed the convictions, but gave leave to appeal to the Privy Council. The Crown petitioned the Judicial Committee to quash the appeals as incompetent, having regard to sect. 1025. Applt. petitioned for special leave to appeal. The petitions were heard with the appeals:—Held: (1) each appeal was in a "criminal case" to which sect. 1025 applied, so far as it was valid; (2) in the absence of argument to the contrary, sect. 1025 prevented the Appellate Div. from giving effective leave to appeal; (3) sect. 1025 did not exclude the prerogative right to give leave to appeal; (4) the cases were clearly not within the category of the exceptional cases in which special leave to appeal was advised in a criminal matter.—NADAN v. R., [1926] A. 108a. —— —— Question of substance, not of form.]—(1) The Parliament of Canada cannot, by purporting to create penal sections under head 27 of the above sect., appropriate to itself exclusively a field of jurisdiction in which, apart from that procedure, it could exert no legal authority ; if, when examined as a whole, legislation in form criminal is found, in aspects & for purposes exclusively within the provincial sphere, to deal with matters committed to the provinces, it cannot be upheld as valid.

Reciprocal Insurance Act 1922, of Ontario, authorised any person to exchange, through the medium of an attorney, with persons, whether in Ontario or elsewhere, reciprocal contracts of insurance, subject to provisions as to licences & other conditions ; & it was provided that actions in respect of such contracts might be maintained in the cts. of the province. A Dominion Act of 1917 inserted in the Criminal Code (R. S. Can. 1906, c. 146), sect. 508c, by which it was made an indictable offence for any person to solicit or accept any insurance risk except on behalf of a co. or assocn. licensed under Insurance Act, 1917, of Canada. In answer to questions referred by the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario to the Appellate Div. :—Held : (2) the Act of 1922 was intra vires the province, since (a) its provisions were capable of receiving a meaning according to which, whether enabling or prohibitive, they applied only to persons & acts within the territorial jurisdiction of the province, & (b) although it might incidentally affect aliens & dominion cos., it did not deal with them as such, but was an Act dealing with contracts of insurance ; (3) the making & carrying out of contracts licensed pursuant to the Act were not rendered illegal, or otherwise affected, by Criminal Code, s. 508c ; that sect. was invalid, since, in substance though not in form, it was in regulation of contracts of insurance, subjects not within the legislative competence of the Dominion ; (4) the answers under (2) & (3) would be the same if any of the persons subscribing to a reciprocal insurance contract was (a) a British subject not resident in Canada immigrating into Canada, or (b) an alien. In so answering this question no opinion was expressed as to the competence of the Dominion Legislature to enact Insurance Act, 1917, ss. 11 & 12 (1), whereby restrictions were placed upon aliens & British cos. in the matter of carrying on insurance business in Canada ; but sect. 12 (2) was held to be invalid in relation to the subject of immigration.—A.-G. In the case of two railway bridges, one of them authorised by dominion statute, which fell within the exception :—Held : (1) the right & power of safeguarding the navigation of the river passing under & alleged to be obstructed by them was also in the hands of the Dominion; (2) the rights & powers of the Dominion were not affected by the provisions of a treaty entered into between Great Britain & the United States in 1842, the Ashburton Treaty, which proceeded on the assumption that the Govt. of New Brunswick had power to make regulations as to the navigation of the river in question, there being no undertaking or guarantee, either to the United States or to New Brunswick, that such powers should remain unaltered for all time, & the change made being wholly consistent with the treaty.—A.-G. 130f. Combines Investigation Act, 1927—Validity.] —Combines Investigation Act, R. S. Can., 1927 (c. 26), by sect. 36 makes it an indictable offence, punishable by fine or imprisonment, to be a party to the formation or operation of a "combine" as defined by sect. 2, that is, shortly stated, a combine which is to the detriment of the public & restrains or injures trade or commerce. Inquiries whether a combine exists are to be conducted by appointed officials, who are given powers to examine books, demand returns, & summon witnesses. By sects. 29 & 30, customs duties may be reduced, & licences revoked, where the duties are used to facilitate a combine, or when the holder of a patent uses it so as unduly to limit manufacture or increase the price of any article. The Criminal Code, R. S. Can., 1927 (c. 36), s. 498, makes it an indictable offence, punishable by fine or imprisonment, to conspire, combine, or agree unduly to limit transportation facilities, restrain commerce, or lessen manufacture or competition:—Held: sect. 498 of the Code & the Act, excepting sects. 29 & 30, were intra vires the Parliament of Canada under British North America Act, 1867, s. 91, head 27 (criminal law), & sects. 29 & 30 could be supported under sect. 91, heads 3 & 22. The legislation being in its path & substance within enumerated heads of sect. 91, it was not material that it affected property & civil rights in the Provinces (sect. 92, head 13), or if it affected, which it did not, the administration of justice in the Provinces (sect. 92, head 14). The Dominion could employ its own executive officers to carry out legislation which was within its constitutional authority. It was unnecessary to discuss whether the legislation was intra vires also under sect. 91, head 2 (the regulation of trade & commerce), but the Judicial Committee did not assent to a contention that the power under that head was confined to the furtherance of a general power which the Dominion possessed independently of it. —PROPRIETARY ARTICLES TRADE ASSOCN. v. A.-G. Therefore the power given the registrar by sect. 135 of Companies Act, 1929 (Alta.), which requires certain information to be given by a foreign co. when applying for registration, cannot apply to a Dominion co.

(2) The latter part of sub-sect. (1) of sect. 145 of said Companies Act & sub-sect. (2) of sect. 145, dealing with prospectuses, are invalid with respect to Dominion cos.

(3) A provision that foreign cos. shall pay such fees for registration as may be prescribed by order in council is invalid with respect to Dominion cos., since the fees being subject to order in council, may be altered at any time & may be increased so as to make it practically impossible for foreign cos. to come into the province at all & in that way prevent a Dominion co. from carrying on its business in the province.

234b. Bechuanaland Protectorate — Magistrates' Court—Limited to criminal matters.]—By a proclamation issued in 1891 pursuant to Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1890 (c. 37), Magistrates' & other cts. were established in the Bechuanaland Protectorate. By clause 8 the jurisdiction of the cts. was not to extend to any matter in which natives only were concerned, unless exercise of the jurisdiction was necessary in the interests of peace, or for the prevention or punishment of acts of violence. By clause 9 where jurisdiction was exercised the decision was to follow the laws & customs of the natives concerned, unless those laws & customs were incompatible with peace, order, & good government. Three natives were parties to an armed & murderous attack upon their tribal chief. As punishment the chief, after consulting & with the approval of his native council, caused their houses to be burnt. The action of the chief was in accordance with the custom of the tribe in the case of an armed rebellion. Two of the natives were convicted by a Magistrate of attempted murder, & sentenced to imprisonment; the sentences were reduced, as the houses of the accused had been burnt. Subsequently the three natives brought civil suits in the Magistrates' ct. against the chief for damages in respect of the house burning, & the chief counter-claimed:—Held: the ct. had no jurisdiction in the civil suits having regard to clause 8 of the proclamation, as the matter was one in which natives only were concerned, & there was no evidence of the probability of any further breach of the peace or acts of violence.

Semble: the custom of house burning, above referred to, was incompatible with peace, order, & good government within the meaning of clause 9.—KHAMA v. RATSHOSA, [1931] A. C. 784; 100 L. J. P. C. 229; 145 L. T. 657, P. C.

265a. Recognition of existing proprietary rights—Effect of proclamation.]—After a sovereign State has acquired territory, either by consent, or by cession under treaty, or by the occupation of territory theretofore unoccupied by a recognised ruler, or otherwise, an inhabitant of the territory can enforce in the municipal cts. only such proprietary rights as the Sovereign has conferred or recognised. Even if a treaty of cession stipulates that certain inhabitants shall enjoy certain rights that gives them no right which they can so enforce. The meaning of a general statement in a proclamation that existing rights will be recognised is that the Govt. will recognise such rights as upon investigation it finds existed. The Govt. does not thereby renounce its right to recognise only such titles as it considers should be recognised, nor confer upon the municipal cts. any power to adjudicate in the matter.

Part IV.—Ecclesiastical Law.

345a. Canada—United Church of Canada—Decision not to enter union—Subsequent decision to enter in accordance with provincial legislation—Invalid.]—By an Act to come into force on June 10, 1925, the Dominion legislature incorporated the United Church of Canada so as to give effect to an agreed basis of union between the Presbyterian, Methodist, & Congregational Churches throughout Canada. The congregations of the uniting Churches were to become congregations of the United Church, & their property was to vest therein. By sect. 10, however, if any congregation voted at a meeting held within six months before June 10, 1925, not to enter the union it was not to be affected by the Act, &, by sect. 4 (c), it was to be deemed not to have become a member of the United Church. The legislature of Nova Scotia had passed an Act, to come into force upon the United Church being incorporated, enacting that property of uniting congregations in the Province should vest in the United Church. Sect. 8 (a) provided that if a congregation, at a meeting held within six months after the incorporation, voted not to enter the union its property was not to be affected, but that if the congregation decided later to enter the union the Act was to apply to it & its property. A Presbyterian congregation in Nova Scotia voted at a meeting held within six months before June 10, 1925, not to concur in the union, but at a meeting held within six months after that date voted to enter the United Church:—Held: as by the Dominion Act which incorporated the United Church of Canada the effect of the earlier vote was that the congregation was not a constituent member of that body, it could not by virtue of Provincial legislation become a member, nor could its property vest upon the footing that it was so; further, that the later vote could not be treated as a decision to apply to the United Church for admission, with the effect that, if the application was acceded to, its property vested therein under s. 8 (a). The earlier vote, however, did not necessarily for ever debar the congregation from entering the United Church, as the Dominion Act recognised that a non-concurring congregation might become a member at a later time, though the Dominion legislature at present had not provided means whereby a later union could be effected.—ST. PART IV.

s l. —— Requisites of conversion to Hinduism.]—In the Indian Succession Act (XXXIX. of 1925), the term "Hindu" is used in a theological, as distinguished from a national or racial sense. A person of non-Hindu origin can become a Hindu by conversion. Membership of a caste is not a necessary pre-requisite for being a Hindu. It is a question of fact in each case whether a given person is a Hindu or not. A European does not become a Hindu merely because he professes a theoretical allegiance to the Hindu faith, or is an ardent admirer & advocate of Hinduism, & its practices; but if he resides long in India, abdicates his religion by a clear act of renunciation, & adopts Hinduism by undergoing formal conversion, gives up, along with Christianity, his Christian name & deliberately assumes a Hindu name, marries, in accordance with Hindu religious rites, a person who is a Hindu by race & religion, & cuts himself off from his old environments, & takes to the Hindu mode of life, in such a case the Ct. may justly come to the conclusion that he is a Hindu within Indian Succession Act. A European who becomes a Hindu is governed by Hindu law, the test in such case being not domicil, but religion.—MORARJI v. ADMINISTRATOR-GENERAL OF MADRAS (1928), I. L. R. 52 Mad. 160.—IND.

e iii. —— —— ——.]—By a document dated Mar. 10, 1821, "the British Indian Chiefs of St. Regis," "for themselves & on behalf of their tribe, whom they represent," purported to lease to C., his heirs & assigns, certain land, part of Crown land reserved for the Indians, & not ceded or surrendered to the Crown by the Indians, on Cornwall Island in the river St. Lawrence, for 99 years, "& at the expiration thereof for another & further like period of 99 years & so on until the full end & term of 999 years shall be fully ended & completed." The Chiefs covenanted "that they are the representatives of the said tribe of St. Regis as well as trustees of their estate & as such that they have a perfect right" to make the lease. The consideration was $100 cash & a yearly rent of $10. C. entered into possession on Mar. 10, 1821, & possession was continued in successive assignees, & it was admitted in this action that deft. was in possession as assignee of whatever rights C. had under the lease. The rent was paid yearly to Mar. 10, 1920, when the Crown refused to accept further rents. From about 1875 the rent was paid to the Department of Indian Affairs, for the benefit of the Indians. The lease was registered at the Department of Indian Affairs in 1875. There was in evidence a letter of Feb. 26, 1875, from an official of the Department to one B., an Indian, in reply to a letter from B., not produced, in terms apparently recognising rights of C. under the lease. The Crown notified deft. to give up possession at the expiration, Mar. 10, 1920, of the term of 99 years; &, deft. not complying, it took proceedings to recover possession of the land, as ungranted Crown lands reserved for the Indians:—Held: the Crown was entitled to possession. The award in favour of petitioner having been set aside, he brought a suit to set aside the award in favour of resps. The appellate ct. in India made a decree dismissing the suit & refused to certify under Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, s. 110, that the case was a fit one for appeal to the Privy Council in that it would "involve, directly or indirectly, some claim or question to or respecting property" of Rs. 10,000, or upwards. 538a. Question of jurisdiction of colonial court—To issue mandamus to inferior court.]—The Supreme Ct. of Ontario has jurisdiction to mandamus a county ct. judges criminal ct. to try, according to the procedure provided by Criminal Code of Canada, s. 827, a person against whom an indictment has been found by a grand jury for the county. The fact that no rules have been made as to the issue of a mandamus in a criminal matter does not preclude the Supreme Ct. from exercising its full powers.

Special leave to appeal to the Privy Council was granted upon a petition alleging two grounds : (1) that the Supreme Ct. had not jurisdiction to issue a mandamus in the circumstances above referred to, & (2) that under the Criminal Code the persons indicted had not the option given by sect. 827 to be tried without a jury. Special leave was granted on the first ground ; the question whether the appeal could be entertained was reserved :—Held : the appeal should be dismissed, since the ground upon which special leave was given failed, & the second ground was merely a question of procedure & was not one upon which an appeal would be entertained.—A.-G. 564a. Trial for murder by judge alone—Trial by jury impracticable or not permitted by local circumstances.]—Applt. was convicted of the murder of his wife, & sentenced to death upon a trial in Ashanti without a jury. By sect. 9 of Ashanti Administration Ordinance, 1902, "so far as it is practicable & local circumstances permit" the procedure, civil & criminal, in the Ashanti ct. was to be the same as in the Supreme Ct. of the Gold Coast Colony ; in that ct. it was imperative by Ordinance that a trial for murder should be with a jury. The trial judge had not stated that a trial with a jury was not practicable or not permitted by local circumstances. It appeared on the appeal that there never had been trial by jury in Ashanti. The death of applt.'s wife resulted from a wound inflicted by a shot from a revolver while she & the applt. were together alone in a room. By a dying declaration she had stated that the revolver had been fired accidentally by herself in a manner which she described. The applt. in his evidence also attributed the wound to an accident by her. There was much circumstantial evidence :—Held : it should be presumed that a trial with a jury was not practicable, or was not permitted by local circumstances, & accordingly that the appeal failed so far as it was based upon want of jurisdiction ; but the appeal should be allowed upon the ground that the applt. had not the substance of fair trial, & had suffered substantial & grave injustice, in that the trial judge, having come to the conclusion that the revolver had been fired by the applt., had entirely failed to consider whether the evidence justified a conviction for murder as opposed to manslaughter, & the Board was clearly of opinion that it did not.—KNOWLES v. R., [1930] A. The collector of taxes, the chief revenue authority, & the High Ct. successively decided against them. They then appealed to His Majesty in Council:—Held: on a preliminary objection, the decision, judgment, or order made by the High Ct. under Indian Income Tax Act, 1918, s. 51, was merely advisory & not final, & the appeal to His Majesty in Council was, therefore, incompetent.—TATA IRON & STEEL Co. v. BOMBAY CHIEF REVENUE AUTHORITY (1923), L. 640b. —— Order of High Court—On appeal from application to district judge to file award.]—An appeal to the Privy Council lies under Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, s. 109, from a decree or final order of a High Ct. made upon appeal from an order of a district judge upon an application to him to file an award in ct. The appeal is not precluded by sect. 104 (2) of the Code; that provision applies only to an appellate order of a district judge where the application has been made to a subordinate judge.—RAMLAL HARGOPAL v. KISHANCHAND (1923), L. b iii. —— Not from decree affirming court below—What amounts to.]—Pltfs. obtained a mtge. decree in the ct. of the subordinate judge, but their claim to interest pendente lite was disallowed. Defts. appealed to the High Ct. while pltfs. preferred a cross-appeal in respect to interest pendente lite. Defts.' appeal was dismissed while pltfs.' cross-appeal was allowed, the decree of the High Ct. being in the following terms: "The decree of the Ct. below be modified to this extent that interest at the bond rate shall run on the principal up to the expiry of the period of grace." Defts. applied for leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council. The value of the subject-matter of the suit & the appeal was above ten thousand rupees: —Held: the decree of the High Ct. was not one "affirming the decision of the ct. immediately below" within Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, s. 110, & appcts. were entitled as of right to appeal to His Majesty in Council. Further, the appeal could not be limited to the question of interest only, upon which point there was variation in the decree, but appcts. were entitled to appeal from the entire decree.—THAKUR JAMUNA PRASAD SINGH v. JAGARNATH PRASAD SINGH (1929), I. Rs. 13,000. Objections to the award were made by deft. which were disallowed, & the award was ordered to be filed, but as the time fixed for delivery of the factory had by then expired, the ct. considering it unnecessary to incorporate in its decree a direction relating to the delivery of the factory, granted a decree to pltf. only for the Rs. 13,000. Deft. appealed to the High Ct. & his appeal was accepted only to the extent that the decree of the trial ct. was modified to bring it into conformity with the award. Deft. then applied for leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council:—Held: as the High Ct. had in substance affirmed the decision of the trial ct. the alteration made by it in the decree not being of a substantial nature, leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council under Code of Civil Procedure, s. 110, could not be granted.—BANSI LAL v. GOPAL LAL (1928), I. In 1794 the master had reported that the lunatic had no heir-at-law or next of kin. In 1798 & 1801 the Crown made ex gratiâ grants of the funds to certain persons & obtained an indemnity in respect of the grants. In 1926 a petition was presented by persons claiming to be the next of kin of the lunatic for the payment to them of the whole of her personal estate. The parties sought a determination of the following questions: (1) whether the petition was maintainable on the assumption that no part of the funds ever came into the hands of or was dealt with by his present Majesty or his nominees or grantees or was carried to the Consolidated Fund; (2) whether the petition was barred by any Statute of Limitations; (3) whether in view of Petitions of Right Act, 1860 (c. 34), s. 5, suppliants could proceed without serving the petition upon the successors in title of the persons to whom the ex gratiâ grants had been made :—Held : the first question must be answered in favour of suppliants.—Re Mason, [1928] Ch. 385; 97 L. 437b. ——.]—Before the hearing of the action, an application by pltfs. that deft. be ordered to make a further & better affidavit of documents, or in the alternative, that an order be made, under R. S. C., Ord. 31, r. 19A (3), was refused by the master, on the ground that such an order would be contrary to practice. Pltfs. appealed. It appeared from certain letters that had been disclosed that there were certain letters relative to the issues in the action, as well as other documents, which had not been disclosed ; but it was contended on behalf of deft. that, since the coming into operation of the rule, it was no longer open to a pltf. in such a case to ask for a general further & better affidavit, but that he was confined to the remedy given to him by the rule. It was held by ROMER, J., that the rule did give to persons objecting to an affidavit of documents certain rights which did not exist before the rule was framed ; but that it should not be read as interfering with the rights which were possessed before it came into force ; & that it was apparent, from sources which might be referred to, that the deft. had in his possession other documents not disclosed in his affidavit.

to the Ministry of Transport under Regulation of Railways Act, 1871 (c. 78), s. 6. They objected to produce this document on the ground that it was a copy of a confidential document made in discharge of their duty to the Crown & that it was privileged inasmuch as it could not be disclosed without injury to the public interest. The deponent also produced & verified a copy of a letter written by him to the Minister of Transport, & the reply thereto of the Minister to the effect that reports made in pursuance of sect. 6 of the Act aforesaid were furnished for his own information & guidance & that it was his practice in the public interest to decline any request to inspect these reports or to obtain copies of them:—Held: it was the practice of the ct. to accept the statement of a Minister of the Crown upon the question whether production of a document would be contrary to the public interest; & consequently the document in question was privileged from production.

(2) Privilege was also claimed for other documents on the ground that they were "confidential communications at the instance & request & for the use of defts.' solr. between the officials of the deft. co. & between those officials & third persons after this action was threatened or anticipated for the purpose of obtaining for & furnishing to the defts.' solr. evidence & information as to the evidence which will be obtained & otherwise for the use of the said solr. to enable him to defend this action & to advise defts.":—Held: these documents were also privileged.—ANKIN v. LONDON & NORTH EASTERN RY. 1311 ii a. ——.]—Ord. 31, r. 14, sub-r. (2), of the South Australian Rules of Court—which, like R. S. C., Ord. 31, r. 19A, sub-r. (2), of the English rules, provides that where on an application for an order for inspection privilege is claimed for any document, it shall be lawful for the ct. or a judge to inspect it for the purpose of deciding as to the validity of the claim, applies where privilege is claimed for an official document on the ground that its disclosure would be contrary to the interests of the public, even though the claim is supported by a statement to that effect by the Minister responsible. The ct. has always had in reserve the power to inquire into the nature of the document for which protection is so sought, & to require some indication of the injury which would result from its production. When a State, being a party to litigation & bound to give discovery, claims privilege for documents upon the ground above stated, the claim should be made under oath by a responsible Minister whose mind has been directed to the material question. A claim to protection in the case of documents relating to the trading, commercial or contractual activities of a State can rarely be sustained, especially in time of peace. That documents would prejudice the case of the State in the litigation, or assist the other party, is a compelling reason for their production only to be overborne by the gravest reasons of State policy or security. Applt. brought an action in the Supreme Ct. of South Australia against resp. State claiming damages for alleged negligence in the care of wheat placed in the control of the State under Wheat Harvest Acts, 1915–17. Upon an order for discovery the respondent State, by an affidavit made by a civil servant, claimed privilege in respect of 1,892 documents tied in three bundles, & stated to be State documents, comprising communications between officers administering the department concerned; there was exhibited to the affidavit a minute by the responsible Minister stating (inter alia) that disclosure of the documents would be contrary to the interests of the State & of the public:—Held: the minute was inadequate to support the claim of privilege, as it was too vague in the circumstances of the case, & was not a statement on oath showing that the Minister had himself considered each of the documents, or indicating the nature of the suggested injury to the interests of the public; & the Supreme Court should exercise its power under Ord. 31, r. 14, sub-r. (2), to inspect the documents, that course being less likely to cause delay than an order for a further and better affidavit of documents.—ROBINSON v. SOUTH AUSTRALIA STATE (No. 2), [1931] A. Claims against the fund were in due course filed by the owners of the N. & the owners of the other ship, the S., & also by the owners of cargo on the S. The same solrs. presented the claims on behalf of the owners of both ships. The owners of cargo on the S., who were not parties to the collision action, then sought leave to administer four interrogatories to the owners of the S. Nos. 1 & 2 asked whether there had been, as between the owners of the two ships, a mutual abandonment of claim or a settlement on other terms. No. 3 inquired whether there had been any assignment of the claim of the owners, master, & crew of the S.; & No. 4 asked by whom the particular solrs. were instructed to present the claim of the owners of the S. :—Held : the first three interrogatories were necessary either for disposing fairly of the cause or matter or for saving costs, within R. m i. —— Based on price of gasoline.] —Pltf. leased an automobile service station from deft. oil co. at a rental of $200 per month payable in advance. A few days later it was agreed that the rent should be paid by the addition of a charge of two & a half cents per gallon, payable on delivery, to the price of the gasoline to be bought by the lessee from deft. The lease provided that it should be at the pleasure of the lessor & determinable forthwith on the delivery of a written notice to the lessee. The original lease provided that the first payment of rent should be on July 1, but pltf. went into occupation on June 16 & agreed to pay one-half of the previous tenant's rent for that month. On Aug. 1, seizure was made under a warrant of distress stated to be for one & a part month's rent due on July 1, & pltf. being unable to pay the amount demanded, agreed to deft.'s demand that he take a certain amount for his goods from a suggested new tenant who was then present. Out of this amount the alleged rent was paid & pltf. drove away. The written notice provided for in the lease had not been given to pltf. In an action for illegal distress & eviction :—Held : even if the sum mentioned in the warrant was due for rent on Aug. 1, the distress was wrongful. The distress was expressed to be for rent due on July 1, but under the arrangement varying the lease no fixed rent fell due & payable on any day & no sum was in fact due & payable on July 1, & since the rent for the part of June had been all paid at the time of the seizure it was wrongful to include it in the distress.—DENYER v. BRITISH AMERICAN OIL CO. 424a. —— ——.]—The tenant of a dwelling-house hired goods from pltfs. under a hire-purchase agreement, by which he agreed to pay punctually the instalments & also the rent of the premises on which the goods might be. By a clause of the agreement, in case of any breach, the owners might, by written notice, forthwith determine the agreement, & thereupon neither party thereafter should have any rights under it. The instalments being in arrear, pltf. served on the hirer a notice terminating the agreement, & claiming a return of the goods. A distress was subsequently levied on behalf of the landlord, & the goods the subject of the hire-purchase agreement were seized. In an action by the owners for illegal distress, the county ct. judge gave judgment for pltfs.:—Held: as soon as the notice terminating the agreement was given the right of the hirer to possession of the goods was at an end, & neither party to the agreement had any rights under it. When the distress was levied there was therefore no hire-purchase agreement in force relating to the goods, & they were not at that time "comprised in any hire-purchase agreement" within Law of Distress Amendment Act, 1908 (c. 53), s. 4. & the distress was illegal.—SMART BROS., LTD. v. HOLT, [1929] 2 K. back of the adjoining houses to the back premises of pltf.'s house. At the time of the conveyance a right of access for vehicles to pltf.'s back premises over the whole roadway was enjoyed with the house conveyed. 196a. —— Right reputed to be enjoyed with land.]—Pltf. at the date of the action was the owner in fee simple of certain plots of land in the village of C. in the county of Sussex, numbered on the Ordnance Survey Map 634, a portion of 635 & 636; also of a strip of land coloured brown on the plan on the conveyance to pltf., leading from the plot 634 & part of 635 to the high road running from C. to a common. Deft. became in Oct. 1926, the owner of other plots, numbered 652, 653, 654 & 618 in the same parish. Pltf. had previously purchased the strip coloured brown in 1925, the parcels being as follows: "All that strip of land leading from W. Fields"—which were the plots 652 & 653—"to the high road running from the village of C. to . . . C. common in the parish of P. . . ."; the habendum being to pltf. in fee simple "to the use that the vendor his heirs & successors in title owner or owners . . . of the hereditaments coloured red"—which were the plots 634, 653 & 652—". . . shall have full right & liberty . . . to pass & repass . . . over & along the piece of land coloured brown on the said plan . . ." Pltf. subsequently, in June, 1925, purchased at an auction sale the plots referred to above, 634, part of 635, 652 & 653; deft. also bought the plots numbers 618 & 654. The plots purchased by pltf., being Lot 24 in the sale, were described as including a right of way for all purposes over the brown strip. By that purchase pltf., having become the legal owner of the dominant & servient tenements, the right of way became merged. Pltf. subsequently contracted to sell plots 653 & 652 to deft. In the draft conveyance submitted to pltf.'s solrs. by deft.'s solrs., a right of way was inserted in favour of the purchaser (deft.) over pltf.'s land to the brown strip. This was struck out by the solrs. for the vendor (pltf.); & no grant was shown in the conveyance ultimately executed by the parties in Oct. 1926, of any right of way. Pltf. found later that deft. was passing over a track in plot 634 in order to make use of the brown strip for the purpose of taking farm carts from his own land over pltf.'s property to the high road; & he claimed a right of way. Pltf. sought a declaration that deft. was not entitled to any such right of way as he claimed, & further that the conveyance to deft. of plots 652 & 653 might be rectified by the express exclusion therefrom of any implied right of way which might arise under Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 62:—Held: though the right to use the track was one reputed to be enjoyed with the land, that was plots 653 & 652, & to that extent deft. was entitled to succeed, yet pltf. was entitled to have the conveyance rectified. The evidence showed that neither pltf. nor deft. intended that any such right should pass on the conveyance of plots 653 & 652. The conveyance therefore would be rectified by the insertion therein of proper words limiting the implication of any right of way which might arise under the Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 62.—CLARK v. BARNES, [1929] 2 Ch. 368; 99 L. 196b. What amounts to "assurance of property or of an interest therein"—Agreement for lease exceeding three years.]—By an agreement in writing dated Oct. 10, 1923, J. agreed to demise to pltf. The Gardens, "with the paddock, orchard, & adjoining gardens," for seven years from Sept. 29, 1923. These premises were situate in a large park called Wood Green Park, & were not approached by any public road. The agreement did not expressly reserve any right of way to pltf. In 1926, J. executed a lease to deft. of The Hall, & the remainder of the park, for fourteen years from Mar. 25, 1926. The Hall had previously been let to H., who had surrendered his lease. A carriage drive ran from a public highway called Silver Street, through Wood Green Park, by the side of the front door of The Gardens, & on to The Hall. At the date of the agreement of Oct. 1923, J. was constructing, & afterwards completed, an unmetalled way from Silver Street to the back of The Gardens: but after that date pltf. constantly used the drive. Deft. obstructed pltf. in his use of the drive. In an action by pltf., claiming to be entitled to a right of way over the drive:—Held: (1) an agreement for a lease exceeding a term of three years is not an "assurance of property or of an interest therein," within Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 205 (1) (ii), & therefore cannot be deemed to include the general words of sect. 62 of that Act; (2) the tenant was in the same position as if the ct. had granted specific performance of the agreement, i.e., in regard to rights of way, as if, before the coming into force of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, the property had been demised with no mention of rights of way; &, in the circumstances, a demise to pltf. of a right to 204a. —— Intention of parties—No evidence of intention to determine status quo.]—Two adjoining houses, originally belonging to one person, subsequently became vested in pltf. & deft. respectively. For some years before the severance of ownership, a creeper had been growing in what was now deft.'s garden with its foliage spreading along the wall of pltf.'s house. Also, again before the severance of ownership, the post of a gate leading from what was now deft.'s garden had been fastened by plugs & nails into pltf.'s wall. The growth of the creeper had from time to time reached pltf.'s gutter, & he had been obliged to cut it back. Pltf. brought an action for trespass in respect of the two above-mentioned acts, & the county ct. judge found both acts to be trespasses:—Held: both the growth of the creeper on pltf.'s wall & the fastening of the gate to pltf.'s wall would amount to trespasses, unless they could be justified by the existence of an easement; the implied reservation of an easement in a grant of property depends on the common intention of the parties; here there was no evidence that it was not the intention of the parties to the conveyance that creeper & gate-post should remain, & therefore an easement in each case was impliedly reserved; there was, however, a duty on the part of the grantee to use care that the grantor's property was not unduly interfered with; deft. in allowing the creeper to obstruct pltf.'s gutter had failed to use necessary care, & as to this part of the case the award as to damages must stand.—SIMPSON v. WEBER (1925), 133 L. T. 46; 41 T. L. R. 302, D. C.

210a. —— —— Matter of convenience & not necessity.]—Where real property is severed by the grant of a part of it, there can be no implied reservation, in favour of the property retained, of an easement of convenience; but only of an easement of necessity.

Two adjoining messuages in a terrace, Nos. 28 & 30, in common ownership, were leased on a ninety-nine years' lease, which, in 1896, was assigned to G., who in 1901 assigned the lease of No. 30 to pltf.'s predecessors in title, without reserving expressly in favour of No. 28, the property retained, any right of way across the garden of No. 30. In 1904 G. assigned the lease of No. 28 to deft.'s predecessor in title. Pltf. claimed in the county ct. an injunction restraining deft. from crossing on a path across the garden of No. 30 from a gate in the fence between the two properties, to a gate opposite, which led into a passage-way giving access to the road in front of the terrace. Deft. claimed a right of footway across this path by reason of her occupation of No. 28. The county ct. judge found that both at the time when there was unity of possession of Nos. 28 & 30, & from the time when the lease of No. 30 had been assigned, the path had always been used for the limited purpose of removing dust & refuse & for bringing in coal, & for no other purpose. But he did not find whether this user was by pltf.'s leave & courtesy, or whether there was an apparent & continuous easement from some certain time. Confusing the dates & thinking that the lease of the alleged dominant tenement, No. 28, was first assigned, when in fact the lease of No. 30 was first assigned, he held that although deft. had no unrestricted right of way across the path, yet, in 1901, there was an implied grant of an apparent quasi-easement enuring to deft. for the limited purpose of removing refuse & bringing in coal, & he made a declaration to that effect:—Held: there was no evidence that on the grant in 1901 to the pltf.'s predecessor in title where was an implied reservation of a right of way in favour of deft. across the garden of pltf. for the removal of dust & refuse & the delivery of coal.—ALDRIDGE v. WRIGHT, [1929] 2 K. The leased property as described in the lease did not embrace this road, but the lessee claimed that be & prior occupiers of the leased house had the use of it, &, as one of the named boundaries was the roadway, the lease impliedly gave him a right of way over it:—Held: the lessee was not entitled to the right-of-way.—BREADY v. MCLENNAN (No. 2), [1924] 3 W. g iii. —— —— —— —.]—The decisions in England prior to 1881 were not uniform on the question whether a right of way was a continuous easement or not; but the Indian Easements Act adopted the view that it was not. Hence on a partition of two tenements, a right of way even over a well-formed & metalled road does not pass to the grantee as a continuous easement. It is this view, as enacted in the Act, that must govern wherever the Act is in force, in preference to the now well-established view in England. The way may, however, pass to the grantee if it is an easement of necessity; but an easement of way cannot be termed "necessary" though the way was used as a way before the partition or even though it may be the most convenient or reasonable means of access, if in fact there is another way.—NARAYONA GAJAPATIRAJU v. RATNAYAMMAJI (1929), I. 273a. —— Right to take water from artificial channel—Limited to capacity of channel at time of grant.]—In 1894 the Crown, by an Ontario patent, granted to applts. the banks & bed of a natural outflow from a very large lake, & the adjoining water power. The grant provided that it was not to be construed as conferring exclusive rights elsewhere upon the lake or upon other streams, nor as authority to restrict any powers or privileges therebefore enjoyed by the Crown. Applts. used water power from the outflow to work an electrical power plant. In 1892 & 1891 the Crown had similarly granted to resps.' predecessors in title land the boundaries of which, in each case, included a mill & an artificial channel from a bay of the lake. The mills had been erected & the channels made by the grantees with the approval of the Crown; the grants mentioned the mill races, but did not expressly include water power. Resps. used water power from the channels to work their mills. Water passing through the channels & the mill sluices, when open, flowed into the river formed by the outflow at a point below applts.' works. Applts. brought actions to restrain resps. from diverting water from the lake :—Held : having regard to the circumstances in which the grants of 1892 & 1891 were made they each conferred an easement upon the respective resps. to use water from the channel for the purpose of working a mill, & the grant to applts. was subject to that easement. The easement was limited only by the capacity of the respective channels when granted, not by the size or character of the mill then existing thereon; although the water could be used only for working a mill, it could be used to develop electrical power to work or light a mill.—KEEWATIN POWER CO., LTD. v. LAKE OF THE WOODS MILLING CO., LTD., [1930] A. 515. For the paragraph in the original volume substitute the following paragraph :—

—— Acquiescence in obstruction of way.]—In 1870 a row of houses was put up for sale by auction in eleven lots. One of the conditions was that a strip of land fifteen feet in width, running the entire length of the lots & being the rear portions of the back gardens of the houses, was intended to form a right of way from the back garden of each house into Church Road, which bounded the side of lot 1 on the south, & that the lots would be sold subject to & with the benefit of such right of way, & that the respective purchasers should at the earliest possible moment remove the fifteen feet of nd garden wall & form the right of way. This condition was recited in each of the conveyances. Lot 1 was conveyed subject to the right of way of the owners of the other lots & lots 2 & 3 with the benefit of & subject to the right of way. The purchaser of lot 1 let it for a term of fifty years, which expired on June 15, 1922, subject to the right of way. In 1904 pltf. took an assignment of this lease, & in 1911 he purchased the fee simple of lots 2 & 3, with the benefit & subject to the right of way. Deft. was the present owner of lot 1. For fifty years from the date of the original sale no attempt was made to form the proposed roadway, the garden walls dividing the several lots remained intact, & the wall separating lot 1 from Church Road was not breached. Church Road was six feet above the level of the back gardens. In 1883 the original lessee of lot 1 in the course of erecting some stables in his back garden raised the surface of the strip of land at the end of his lot to the level of Church Road, with the result that there was a drop of six feet from that strip into lot 2. In 1919 pltf., in anticipation of the expiration of his lease, proposed to build a garage on lots 2 & 3. With that object in view he pulled down part of the wall which separated the rear portion of lot 1 from Church Road & erected gates there, & he also raised the level of the rear portion of lot 2 ; & subsequently he caused a car to be driven through the gates over the strip in lot 1 into lot 2. On the expiration of the lease deft. blocked up the gates & obstructed the way. In an action by pltf. as owner of lots 2 & 3 to enforce his right of way against the deft. :—Held : (1) until the land was cleared there could be no effectual creation of a right of way ; (2) having regard to the time which had elapsed before any purchaser attempted to assert his rights under the original conveyance, the inevitable inference was that the arrangement made in 1870 had been abandoned by common consent.—SWAN v. SINCLAIR, [1925] A. There was a dispute as to the westerly 15 feet, as to which deft. alleged that pltf.'s right of way had been abandoned :—Held : the evidence did not justify the inference that the right of way had been abandoned, although it was first used by deft. or her predecessor only.—BAKER v. HARRIS, [1930] 1 D. 620 vi. ——.]—A side door in the wall of the back garden of pltf.'s premises opened into an avenue leading to deft.'s house. Pltf. claimed a right of way from this door, along the avenue, to the avenue gates. Pltf.'s premises were the end house of a terrace of six similar houses, which formed the base of a triangle in the apex of which stood deft.'s house. The avenue from the latter house ran alongside the garden wall of pltf.'s house, & its gates opened on the same street as the front entrance of the terrace of houses. All seven houses had been built by the same person, & continued for some years in the ownership of members of his family. But, by the will of his daughter, who died in 1919, a severance of ownership as between pltf.'s house & deft.'s house was created; &, subsequently, pltf. purchased the fee simple of his house. He gave evidence that he had entered the premises in 1917 under an agreement for a twelve-months' letting, & continued as tenant until he acquired the fee simple interest; & that he had used the door in the garden wall for the purpose of bringing in coal & manure, & of bringing bicycles in & out. Evidence was also given by the tenant of the premises from 1899 to 1907 that he received the key for the door or found it hanging in the premises, that he used the door for the purpose of getting in coal & for porters delivering goods, that his original landlord, who died in 1905, used to get a little path connecting the door with the avenue cindered, & that he gave up the key on the expiration of his tenancy; & evidence was given by the tenant from 1911 to 1916 that he used the door for bringing goods in & out & for getting in coal & manure. Pltf.'s tenancy agreement was not proved, nor was there evidence of any agreement as to a right of way or easement. Only one other house in the terrace of six houses had a back entrance, & this back entrance, which also opened into deft.'s premises, had become disused before action brought. There was no evidence as to its previous user, nor was there any evidence as to the origin of either back entrance :—Held : pltf. had failed to establish his claim.—M'DONAGH v. MULHOLLAND, [1931] I. Pltf. owned a freehold house built in & occupied since 1907, & continuously having adequate light to the windows & openings, including kitchen & scullery windows, on its north side, on which it was bounded by deft.'s house. Up to Jan. 1929, the two houses were separated by narrow passages on either side of a dwarf boundary wall belonging to deft., which was also the boundary wall between the back gardens. At the beginning of Jan. 1929, without intimation to pltf., building operations were begun on deft.'s premises, the boundary wall being raised to form a side wall of the new building. On Jan. 28 pltf.'s solrs. wrote to deft., her builders & her architect, asking that the work should cease at once. Two days later the building was still proceeding, & on Feb. 4 the wall was 15 feet high. On the next day pltf. issued a writ, & on Feb. 15 a motion came before the ct. island, standing in a shallow lake, which in the dry season became a muddy marsh. The land surrounding the island belonged to deft., & the lease provided that pltf. should have a right of way across it, nothing being said as to the mode of exercising the right. Pltf. having built a trestle bridge from the island to the main land :—Held : pltf.'s mode of user was reasonable, & deft. was not justified in interfering with the bridge.—BUTCHART v. DOYLE (1897), 24 A. R. 615. —CAN.

s1. Removal of existing obstruction —Way granted free of obstruction.]—Where a right of way is granted over land on which there exists an obstruction at the date of the grant, but free from it, it is for the grantee to get rid of the obstruction by his own act. The grantor is not under any obligation in the absence of a contract to that effect.—SPEAR v. ROWLATT, [1924] N. Z. L. R. 801.—N.Z.

PART VII. SECT. 6, SUB-SECT. 3.—D. (b).

759 i. General rule.]—Apart from special custom or express contract, the owner of a servient tenement is not bound to execute any repairs necessary to ensure the enjoyment of the easement by the owner of the dominant tenement.—SPEAR v. ROWLATT, [1924] N. Z. L. R. 801.—N.Z.

PART VII. SECT. 8.

p i. —— —— ——.]—Deft. having, by grant, a right of way over a strip of land, the property of pltf. :—Held : pltf. was entitled to erect a fence upon the boundary between the strip & deft.'s land, allowing deft. reasonable access by a gate or gates to the way.—LEWIS v. WAKELING (1923), 54 O. L. R. 647.—CAN.

s i. —— —— Whether duty on dominant owner to close.]—A landowner over whose holding an adjoining owner had a general right of way erected a gate across the passage over which the right existed. There was no intention on the part of the servient owner to derogate from the rights of the dominant owner, but the latter, objecting to the obstruction, left the gate open after he had used the way. The servient owner, suing by civil bill, claimed damages for the failure & refusal by the dominant owner to close the gate. No actual damage was caused :—Held : the gate having been erected by the servient owner in the reasonable & proper exercise of his rights in his own property, that an obligation was cast upon the dominant owner to shut it.—GEOGHEGAN v. HENRY, [1922] 2 I. R. 1. —IR.

s ii. —— —— ——.]—When a gate is erected across a private road there is no absolute obligation on the owner of the dominant tenement to close such gate after passing or repassing on the private road.—HENDER v. GOHL, [1925] S. A. S. R. 325.—AUS.

the effect that in considering whether a proposed obstruction would amount to a nuisance, non-ancient light from other quarters of which the dominant owner might be deprived at any time ought not to be taken into account were not intended to interfere with this paramount principle. If, therefore, the dominant tenement is rebuilt in such a way that the area of coincidence between an old & new window is much smaller than the old window, so that the ancient-light area is greatly diminished, the dominant owner cannot ask the ct. to measure the nuisance, if any, by treating the rest of the new window, rendered obstructible by his own act, as blocked up.—NEWS OF THE WORLD, LTD. v. FAIRHEAD (ALLEN) & SONS, LTD., [1931] 2 Ch. 402; 100 L. 1226a. Whether party-wall entitled to support—From adjacent building.]—Pltf. & deft. were the owners of adjoining houses, separated by a party-wall, & with implied mutual rights of support. Pltf. alleged that owing to lack of repair & underpinning deft.'s house was subsiding, dragging the party-wall over, & thereby damaging pltf.'s house:—Held: pltf.'s allegations had not been substantiated by the evidence. Semble: even if they had been substantiated pltf. would have had no cause of action.—SACK v. JONES, [1925] Ch. 235; 94 L. sl. By natural right.]—Applt. & resp. were the owners of adjoining agricultural farms, the natural fall of which was from that of resp. to that of applt. In the farming of his property resp. kept open certain surface drains constructed many years before, the effect of which was to convey the surface water from his farm to that of applt. On a claim by applt. for an injunction to restrain resp.'s action:—Held: when two contiguous fields, one of which stands upon higher ground than the other, belong to different proprietors, nature itself may be said to constitute a servitude on the inferior tenement by which it is obliged to receive the water which falls from the superior; & if the water which would otherwise fall from the higher ground without hurting the inferior tenement should be collected in one body by the owner of the superior in the natural use of his property for draining or otherwise improving it, the owner of the inferior is, without the positive constitution of any servitude, bound to receive that body of water on his property.
